Twenty-eight gores—no less—make this seemingly simple but most sophisticated dress that any woman who is spending the summer in town will enjoy after, as well as during, daylight hours. Of sheer black crepe, it has an adjustable neckline which may be worn high or low, with or without the crisp white pique collar.

By MARIAN YOUNG

NEA Service Staff Correspondent.

NEW YORK.—There's a prim, spick-and-span, schoolgirl look about daytime clothes for town that smart women are buying right now. They like simple, dainty suits worn with snow white blouses. They search for—and find—wonderful dark sheer dresses with trim little white collars and cuffs. And they like particularly box jackets in printed or plain material with skirts matching or contrasting.

After a spring of prints, frilly blouses with your tailored suits and other feminine effects, a simple navy or black sheer, gored from top to bottom with a swirling, whirling hemline, is sure to be a hot weather pick-me-up. One especially nice model is made from twenty-eight gores which are extremely narrow in the bodice and increasingly wider from neckline to hem. Plain, flat bone buttons and a turn-down collar of white pique are the only trimming. With fairly formal accessories, this could be worn after as well as during daytime hours.

Another navy sheer has a circular skirt that molds the hips and flares at the hem and has bands on the bodice that simulate pockets. This, too, has a prim, schoolgirl collar in white pique. And, like the gored model, is nice for the office, general street wear in town, informal dinner and the movies.

Giddy Accessories

The accessories you'll wear with your new schoolgirl sheers are a trifle giddy. Chanel makes a necklace of glass beads that look exactly like soap bubbles. Alix features copper and brass belts. And there are peasant belts in wool knits with colorful embroidery. The charm bracelet rage still rages. Hats for all occasions are trimmed with flowers and veils. Fannel gloves are just as smart as they were last spring. Even low-heeled shoes of the sports type are likely to be toeless and cut out in the most frivolous manner.

If you have plenty of sheers on hand, how about a polka dot dress? White dots on navy for instance. The polka dot jacket suit, shown here today, is ideal for office and general town wear and can certainly go a-traveling.

Gray, in various shades, is becoming increasingly important. In wrinkle-proof fabrics in light shades, it makes some of the nicest travel suits and frocks. Gray flannel slacks with a pure white sweater or shirt strike a fresh note. Gray linen is widely used. And if you want something subtle in a print, one with a gray background and dusty rose figures can't be beat.

A polka dot jacket suit of silk surah is a smart antidote for hot summer days in the office or a shopping trip downtown. It has a flattering, pleated skirt and a box jacket with buttons from top to bottom. A simple, classic blouse of pure white silk is worn with it. This is the kind of suit that well-groomed women love. It doesn't wrinkle easily and will come back from the cleaner's looking fresh and new.

She carried a shower bouquet of Tallman roses. Orville Buffington, as maid of honor, was lovely in a frock of blue lace. Frank Fox acted as best man to the bridegroom.
