Prof. Bites Dog.

AN eastern college professor, working diligently to reach that coveted scholastic goal, the letters Ph.D. after his name, has written a 280-page monograph attacking the American Legion.

There is a point about that which should not be overlooked. A doctor of philosophy degree can be earned in many less spectacular ways. However such degrees are becoming pretty common so Professor Gellerman contrives to get headlines for himself, and his doctorate—all at one stroke. The two things he accomplished fit well together. A man who has a Ph.D. and has made the nation's headlines has a much better chance of getting a good job than the unknown but brilliant student.

As for the professorial attack upon the American Legion, that may be dismissed with a smile. The organization of veterans, is much too large and sincere, and important, to be seriously injured or even disturbed by the splutterings of a publicity seeking student.

Good Showman

LAST Friday evening the president again spoke to the nation taking as the burden of his remarks that he is a liberal. He defined the term by saying that—to quote him: "Be it clearly understood, however, that when I use the word 'liberal,' I mean the believer in progressive principles of democratic, representative government and not in the wild man who, in effect, leans in the direction of communism, for that is just as dangerous as fascism."

The definition is none too clear, but it will serve his purpose. It is to be used as a platform on which to stand while favorite primary candidates are being endorsed and fought for by the president. With a definition so broad, candidates can be praised or denounced at will without particular acrimony.

This game of politics is wonderful and F. D. R. is by far the greatest politician of recent history. Quarrel with his deeds and ideas as you will, it must be admitted that his political showmanship and his ability to use every news at his command to the very utmost has never been excelled.

JOSEPH SANDHAM—hero; he thought he was on top of the world until he snatched into KELLY ARCHER—heroine; she thought she was headed for the altar until she snatched into ED, THE WEASEL—gangster; he thought he was headed somewhere, too, but affairs somehow got mixed up.

Yesterday, The Weasel heads Joe and Kelly northward and breaks the news that he will hold them until he is safe out of the U. S. A.

CHAPTER V

"When I'm safe outa da U. S. A.," said the Weasel uncompromisingly.

Hardly had Mr. Ed (Weasel) Weynowski made his announcement when he came within an ace not only of getting out of the U. S. A., but of shuffling off this mortal coil altogether.

The Ford had been approaching a sizable bend in the highway and Mr. Sandham, encroached in his fascinating conversation with the Weasel, was hogging the road a little. But as a roadhogger, Mr. Sandham was just a piker compared to Mr. Antonio Giuseppe Tarantino, late of the wrong side of the tracks in Genoa, Italy.

Mr. Antonio Giuseppe Tarantino had charge of a truck carrying a consignment of live poultry destined for the markets of New York City. All the way from the vicinity of Troy, Mr. Tarantino's journey had been uneventful. The result was that he had become careless. His fingers were relaxed on the wheel. His eyes scanned the road ahead but cursorily. And, as he bowed along with Latin abandon, his powerful voice was raised in his own version of "Il Trovatore," which was accompanied by occasional symphonic overtures from the fowls in the rear.

As he approached the bend, Mr. Tarantino's rendition of "Il Trovatore" was just ending. But he was artist enough to know that a good singer always gives a song the full works on the final notes. Wherefore Mr. Tarantino threw back his head, opened his mouth forcefully and gave "Il Trovatore" all he had. His truck careered around the curve almost in the middle of the road.

Joe Sandham perceived this juggernaut roaring down upon him a fraction of a second before Mr. Tarantino became aware of the danger. He swerved the Ford instantly to the right. A split instant later Antonio Giuseppe Tarantino got wise to himself. "Il Trovatore" died unfinished on his lips. A short babbling prayer to his gods replaced it. With a quick heave he swung his wheel also to the right.

There followed five separate events of more or less importance. (1) The Ford delivery truck operated by Mr. Joseph Sandham darted easily off the road, nuzzled its front fender against a telegraph pole and stopped. (2) The truck piloted doubtfully by Mr. Antonio Giuseppe Tarantino, sometime Genoise, did a kind of ponderous version of the Big Apple off the other side of the road, crashed against a low stone wall and languished there. (3) Three crates of live chickens of the Rhode Island Red variety fell off the back of Mr. Tarantino's truck and broke open. (4) Miss Kelly Archer woke up with a forcible start. (5) Ed the Weasel got off one of the finest, most fluent oaths within the memory of man.

Then, for a second, there were no sounds on the Albany Post Road save a frenzied clucking from the rear regions of the chicken truck.

Kelly was the first to speak.

"Nice going," she said. "It's a wonder we aren't all dead."

Ed the Weasel began to fume. He was annoyed at the delay and cast about to find someone upon whom to put the blame. Mr. Joe Sandham appeared as likely a prospect as any.

"Now look what you went and done," he said aggressively,

"Me? I ejaculated. 'My gosh, but for me you'd be tumbling up a hairy altar now. It was that guy's fault.' Whoever's driving that truck."

Over on his side of the road Antonio Giuseppe Tarantino was coming to the front seat of his truck. Not that Mr. Tarantino had been knocked out. It took more than a little motoring accident to knock out such as Mr. Tarantino. But he had been shocked and dazed. Now, however, what with his head slowly collected themselves.

Antonio had not been in America for very many years. But he had resided long enough to know that the best way to comfort one's self after an automobile crash is to howl at the other fellow first. He climbed down out of his truck with the intention of howling in a big way.

He had thought to howl at by himself, as howls the lone wolf in the tall timber. But Fate had seen fit to provide him with assistance. As he began picking his way across the road, a strong consignment of clucking chickens followed, doubtless perceiving in him a possible source of food. Antonio Giuseppe Tarantino arrived at the Ford truck in an aura of wrath and Rhode Island Reds.

Mr. Tarantino paused at the side of the truck, peering through the semi-gloom. The poultry stood embattled behind him, clucking in warlike fashion. Mr. Tarantino's bright eyes swept over Kelly and Joe in the front seat, decided that they looked refined and, consequently, safe to hawl out. He spoke.

"Hey," said Mr. Tarantino, loudly and menacingly, "wotta you tink dees ees, a truck and I losa da chickens. Wasssa matta you, hey?"

ATHLETES OF WEST COAST WIN MEET

Major Honors Captured by Trojans; 2 Oregon Men in Leading Group.

EVANSTON, Ill., June 28.—(AP)—Track and field stars of the Pacific coast conference, with Southern California's great team holding a large share of the honors, boasted a second straight triumph today in their intercollegiate series with representatives of the western conference.

At Northwestern university's stadium, the west coast team swept to a 191 to 35 victory last night. The one sided triumph surpassed the 92 to 44 win scored last year at Los Angeles.

In winning 13 of the 16 events, the Pacific coast team accounted for four of the five meet records and scored five "slams" in addition to taking the 440 yard and the mile relays. Southern California, which recently won its fourth straight national collegiate title, picked up only three points less than the losing team's total.

U. of O. Pair Star

Two University of Oregon men, George Varoff and Mack Robinson, were leaders in the victory.

Varoff distanced his rivals four inches in the pole vault, leaping 14 feet, 2 inches for first place. Milt Padaway of Wisconsin and Ken Dills of Southern California tied for second and third.

Robinson made a fine stretch run in the 220-yard dash to pick up one point for a third place. He placed second in the broad jump and also in the 250-yard low hurdles, which he finished behind Earl Vickery.

Fenske Triumphs

Although the big ten boys were routed, Charles (Chuck) Fenske of Wisconsin could look back on the meet with satisfaction. In his final appearance as a collegian, the long striding Badger ace won the half mile and mile titles.

He whipped Louis Zamperini of Southern California by 12 yards in the mile in the slow time of 4 min. 40 sec. and then came back to take the 880 yard run. Fenske ran the mile in the slow time of 4 min. 20.5 seconds, largely due to the slow pace set for three laps by Leonard Spencer of California.

Nutting Also Double Victor

Arnold Nutting of California was the meet's other double winner. He set new meet records by running the 100 yard dash in 9.7 seconds and broad jumping 25 feet, 2 inches. Two more meet records fell in the hurdles, Jim Humphries of Southern California skimming the 120 yard high in 14.3 seconds and his Trojan teammate, Earl Vickery, winning the 220 lows in 22.9 seconds.

The other meet record was established by Walter Mehl of Wisconsin in the two mile—3 minutes, 13.5 seconds. The big Ten's only other first place winner was Dave Abbruttin of Ohio State, who high jumped 6 feet 6 5/8 inches.

REGATTA WON BY NAVY'S OARSMEN

California's Crew Second, Washington 3rd; Course Record Broken.

By GAYLE TALBOT
POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y., June 28. (AP)—A fighting navy crew that rose to amazing emotional heights when its coach was hurt, has brought national rowing supremacy back to the east after a lapse of six long years.

The middies, no better than third choice when the starting gun sounded, swept down the Hudson in record-shattering time to win yesterday's intercollegiate regatta by a half-length over California, while five shells paddled far in their wake.

Knowing their injured coach, Charles S. (Buck) Walsh, was following their progress by radio from a nearby hospital cot, the emotional tars bent their oars down the four miles in 18 minutes and 19 seconds, seldom relinquishing the lead as they eclipsed the course record of 18:33 3/5 set last year by the Washington Huskies.

The vaunted Washington crew, meeting its first defeat in 13 years since Don Hume became its stroke in 1936, never really figured in the race and finished more than a length back of second place California.

California made a bruising fight of it over the final mile and was timed in 18:20 1/5. Washington, third in 18:25 2/5, and Columbia, fourth in 18:27, also were well under the previous record. The race was rowed on the crest of the mighty Hudson's tide while the ebbing tide.
