Continuing a Squabble

ARGUING is just about the most completely useless way of putting in time that is known to man.

Though it will be impossible to get anywhere with arguing the subject, such discussion will serve to bring out information.

The actual amount, anyhow, was not particularly important. We mentioned them only to show the relative amounts publicly and privately owned.

"We reiterate that we believe we have more potential prosperity in catering to tourists than could possibly come from our timber, be it billions or millions.

This question does not affect the canal. We still fail to see why it would not be a potential cause of a loss of the railroad taxes.

"As a means of creating a lot of jobs and thus easing the unemployment problem, the project is all right; but to dream that it would result in this county a highly commercialized area is just plain hoey.

"We still think we have one of the most beautiful countries in the world and are NOT sold on destroying this beauty for the hope of some very problematical monetary gains in the uncertain when."

The first argument is that timber development will ruin the beauty of the country. Maybe it will. Certainly it will if permitted on an exploitation basis which is what the river project proposal is fundamentally designed to prevent.

Let us face facts and when time comes to choose our representatives and senators let's choose those who stand firm for the things we want and will not be influenced by anyone against the American constitutional rights.

CORVALLIS, June 30.—(AP)—F. L. Ballard, vice-director of the Oregon State college extension service, announced the appointment of Walter Jendryzewski of Hornston as assistant agent in Klamath county and enlightened his staff upon the pronunciation. Just say Jendryzewski.

Washington to date has been largely based upon the timber industry.

To argue that tourists will not come here if there are sawmills operating is rank sophistry. Unless the tourists were to go deep into the forest, which few of them do, he would not know that timber was being cut. The city of Eugene is in the midst of lumber cutting operations, so is Klamath Falls, so is Medford—yes, and so is Portland. Are tourists staying away from any of those points? Are they staying away from Puget Sound where the most ruthless timber cutting has gone on for years?

Answering the question about the 20 per cent that will move by rail—the answer is positively yes—the higher rate will be paid for the very simple reason that not all users of lumber are located where they can ship lumber in by water to good advantage.

The argument that cheaper transportation may not cause greater development here is unsound on the face of it as is the implication that natural beauty will be destroyed by timber development on a conservation basis.

But as a matter of fact, this whole squabble is foolish. There is not any question now as to whether or not the project should be undertaken by the government.

This question arises: What will WE look like after six decades of living on the bounty of the government?

LETTERS to the Editor

CONTROL OF AGRICULTURE SEEN AS CRISIS BREEDER

Editor News-Review—It has seemed for some time that a crisis was rolling upon us as a nation. It hasn't reached the climax yet but seems gathering more and more force to crush us as a nation of free citizens.

Do we want to give up our freedom? Do we want to be regimented and dictated to as a bunch of horses or cattle are driven?

When we talk of collectivism we might just as well think of ourselves as a part of an individual and not as an entire entity or person but a part of a something to be handled by somebody who has the authority rightly or wrongly but not according to the U. S. A. constitution.

The idea of our national capital seems to be to centralize everything. Do we want the activities of our lives to be subject to the control of an outside power? When we grow up to a mature age, we feel like the little boy who said to another "I want to do what I want to do."

Suppose a case like this, as long as no one else's rights is trampled upon, we should be able to raise turkeys and as much wheat, oats or corn to feed them as we desire without asking some commission who sends a man around to look the matter over and report it under advisement till the planting season is over, harvest over and turkeys dead from starvation.

This applies to any line of work or business. Do we want a centralized administration? The time was when we fought away from the mother country and a king but now it seems as if many, many, of our citizens want to put their necks in the yoke of a dictator and relinquish for themselves and their posterity every liberty and freedom ever gained.

Let us face facts and when time comes to choose our representatives and senators let's choose those who stand firm for the things we want and will not be influenced by anyone against the American constitutional rights.

JOSEPH SANDHAM—hero; he thought he was on top of the world until he smacked into KELLY ARCHER—heroine; she thought she was headed for the altar until she smacked into ED, the WEASEL—gangster; he thought he was headed somewhere, but affairs somehow got mixed up.

Yesterday, The Weasel escapes the police and the trio moves on while Kelly thanks Ed for an "entertaining" evening!

With this remark conversation lapsed. For mile after mile Joe drove on steadily, while Kelly sleeping peacefully at his side.

Two o'clock in the morning found the Ford west of Albany proceeding swiftly toward Syracuse. The Weasel had directed Joe as to what roads to take to his hideout across from Niagara Falls.

"No clove to his identity," quoted the Weasel, brimming with self-satisfaction. "I'll say, hey, ain't I pulled that job clean an' neat. I hey, wot da hell!"

"Down look," said Joe, getting down to business. "I wouldn't have told you a thing about this if I hadn't seen that it was necessary. But you've got the drop on me, pard, as we say out in Arizona where the bad men are. And what I want to know is, how far are you prepared to go to earn your cut?"

"The Weasel scratched his head. 'Gee, I dunno,' he said. 'I ain't hep to da snatch racket.'"

"Well, I am, in fact, I wrote the words and music. You don't have to worry your head. All I want to know is, what will you do?"

"You mean you done kidnapin' before?" asked the Weasel unbelievably. "Joe flushed his head around and looked at him pityingly. 'Have I done it before? Don't be a cluck.'"

"At this point Kelly gave a little moan in her sleep. They shot quick glances at her. But her eyes were closed; her body relaxed.

"Shack, eh? Well, that sounds all right. Where is it?" "Pretty near St. Catharines," "Ontario?"

"Shit! I, I guess it's Ontario, all right. Now then, do you think that Cissy can handle this gig? She's a redhead, you know. They're plenty tough."

The magnitude of this idea so impressed Ed the Weasel that for a full minute he sat silent and wondering. Then he pulled himself together and gave vent to a subdued whistle.

this girl by accident. But as soon as I found out who she was, I saw my chance. She was on her way to Boston to marry some bird up there. But her car got wrecked so she asked me to drive her. Well, I had about as much intention of driving her to the moon as to Boston. And I was just—just—er—figuring things out when you came along. And now—now—I sighed regretfully—"I suppose I'll have to cut you in."

The Weasel grasped this. This was the kind of language he spoke. He thrust his gun against Joe's back.

"You're tellin' me," he said. "I'll say you're gonna cut me in—and how. 'Cause I got a gun, see? An' I'm runnin' the show, plenty."

"There you go," said Joe disgustedly. "Gettin' tough. You gun guys have no art, no finesse. All you know is rough stuff. But, me? Why, listen, I'm so slick that this girl doesn't even know she's being kidnaped. How about that?"

"That's a good one," said the Weasel appreciatively. "Bein' kidnaped, she don't know it. Haw! Haw!"

"You said it, fella," the Weasel admitted. "You had me suckin' in. I ought you wanted to marry da doll."

"That's what she thinks to. Wait'll she wakes up."

"This appealed to the Weasel as humor of a high order. He shook with silent mirth on his case of Chandler & Sandham's Peanut Twosomes.

"Now look," said Joe, getting down to business. "I wouldn't have told you a thing about this if I hadn't seen that it was necessary. But you've got the drop on me, pard, as we say out in Arizona where the bad men are. And what I want to know is, how far are you prepared to go to earn your cut?"

LOUIS POSTPONES DEFENSE OF TITLE

CHICAGO, July 1.—(AP)—Julian Black, co-manager of Joe Louis, said the heavyweight champion would forego a defense of his title against Max Baer in September, the Tribune reported today.

Black was quoted as saying Louis "has been working pretty hard and needs a rest" and that the champion would defend the title next spring or summer at the earliest.

The co-manager said this had the approval of Mike Jacobs, New York right promoter who has an option on Louis' services. Black added that Gunnar Burman of Finland would be considered the leading contender in the event Baer is defeated this year.

Louis was said to have cancelled plans to sail Wednesday for a European vacation so that he might supervise building of a new home for his mother in Detroit.

BUDGE WINS TENNIS TITLE OVER AUSTIN

WIMBLEDON, Eng., July 1.—(AP)—Playing in irresistible form, Don Budge crushed Henry Wilfred (Bunny) Austin of England, 6-1, 6-3, 6-3 today to win the all-England singles tennis championship for the second year in succession.

The great Californian never gave Austin a chance. Bunny held his own service in the second game of the opening set and then never won another until he broke Budge's delivery in the fourth game of the final set.

MUNGO OF DODGERS SHUTS OUT BOSTON

Pirates Defeat Cincinnati and Climb to 2nd Place in National Race.

Associated Press Sports Writer They nailed a "for rent" sign on the Dodgers' "doghouse" today. For the first time in years, Van Mungo doesn't live there any more.

The arm gave up his long term lease on the strength of a one-hit pitching effort for a 5-0 win against the Boston Bees yesterday. His classy job featured as fine a collection of hurling as the big leagues have seen on any one day this year, and most of the performances, like Mungo's were surprise packages.

While Mungo's was only one of six elegant elbowing jobs during the day, it was easily the most impressive. More important in the pennant picture, however, were the seven-hitter, Castleman turned in for the Giants and the three-hitter Blanton posted for the Pittsburgh Pirates.

The Giants really didn't need all the pitching Castleman gave them. Almost any finger could have coasted home behind the 19 hits the Giants fired in fanning the Phillies, 14-1.

Since Blanton's three-hitter was at the expense of the slumping Reds from Cincinnati, giving the Pirates a 3-1 decision, the National league race was somewhat changed. The Giants' first-place margin was raised to four full games, and the Reds climbed over the Cubs to second place. The Cubs' game with the Cardinals was rained out.

Over in the American league, the Yanks stretched their winning streak to five straight behind some neat flinging by Ruffing, who allowed only four hits and set down the Athletics, 7-1. The Yanks remained three games behind the Cleveland Indians, however, for the Tribe nosed out the Tigers, 10-9, when a single by Allen, who relieved a driving Bobby Feller in the eighth, drove the winning run across.

Jack Knott, stridely a loss in his days with the Browns, returned to St. Louis as a member of the Chicago White Sox and tossed a four-batter at his ex-mates for an 11-1 victory. Hagby allowed only six hits and paced the Boston Red Sox to an 11-1 win over the Senators.
