JOBLESS CLAIMS GO UNDER NEW SYSTEM

SALEM, July 2—After the July 4th holiday every claimant to jobless insurance under the state unemployment compensation law will be issued an individual "claim book" which will summarize his status for benefits in a manner corresponding to the more familiar savings bank pass book and the individual pay record book carried by Uncle Sam's expeditionary force in the World War.

The new claim book, together with a new form of continued claim payment voucher, will be synchronized with the recently authorized change from a benefit week to a calendar week period of seven consecutive days ending each Saturday at midnight to further simplify and speed administration of the unemployment compensation law by the commission.

Just as in the old army pay record, the claim book will contain the jobless claimant's name, address, claim number and weekly benefit amount when determined. To this information will be added social security number, maximum benefit amount, day for reporting to employment office and earnings by week, if any.

Claimants will be required to present claim books when reporting to the local employment office. Books and a manual of instructions are now ready for distribution to claimants.
