Waste Basket Cargo

AMONG the many things a newspaper editor has to contend with is the morning mail—usually 99.44 per cent worthless and a large percentage of it in envelopes, large and small, inscribed in the upper right hand corner with this legend: "Penalty for Private Use to Avoid Payment of Postage $300."

This morning let's take a look at the stack. First off is a special delivery letter in the editorial typewriter from a brother publisher up in the Willamette valley. He wants to know if he can catch some steelhead. The answer is "no," because they are being caught in the nets at the mouth of the river. But that is not the answer we give him—would not do to be too discouraging so the reply will be that fishing may be better next week—will let him know.

Then there is a cut of a bathing beauty—not bad, either—sent hopefully for publication by an oil company. The idea is that the caption says something about the oil company and so, if published, is rated by that company as some advertising obtained free. So silly. If the company in question sold bathing beauties or even bathing suits, publication of the picture might do the concern some good.

Next is another publicity picture—this time it is right to the point but is so broad in its advertising that the advertising department of any newspaper would scream with indignation if it were printed free of charge. Then there is an important looking bit of mail containing a very expensively printed copy of the "Bill of Rights." The letter with it, mailed by regular mail from New York City on June 29th, asks that the Bill of Rights be printed in our July Fourth edition. Seems to make little difference to the organization which calls itself "A non-partisan movement for liberty and democracy," that most newspapers like this one do not publish on July Fourth and that its communication arrived out west here three days after the Fourth.

Then there is some advertising matter from a concern that will tell us how to sell more advertising to our customers if we will pay them some money.

Then comes the postage free stuff. The Home Owner's Loan corporation sends an envelope containing enough mimeographed stuff to fill about a page. The first paragraph of a blurb which would take more than a column of space says: "Foreclosures on homes authorized by the Home Owners Loan Corporation have declined rather than risen during the recent period of slack business. Every legal leniency is being shown delinquent borrowers." The fact is, of course, that in 1936 homes were being foreclosed by the HOLC at the rate of 8000 a month. That couldn't go on so very long and should be at a less rate now—there would not be homes enough to last this long.

The Department of Agriculture sends some interesting but not very useful dope, 22 pages of it—on farm prices and production.

The National Resources Committee sends a neatly gotten up 20 page report of what was done in Region 9 during May and June. It is probably useful to a planned economy because its preparation doubtless required the services of several people for several days who might otherwise have been unemployed.

There was other mail of more or less interest but the above will serve to describe the contents of the editorial waste basket for today.

echows, who ought to have known better, but DIDN'T, tossed away a total of $34.50 that they couldn't afford to toss away.

In each case, probably, the result will be deprivation of one sort or another.

THERE is poverty in America, which is a great pity. In a land as rich as this, there should be no poverty.

But how are you going to PREVENT poverty when so many people insist on throwing their money away?

SUPPOSE we divided up all the wealth in America, and gave to each person his exact and equal share of the total. How long would this artificially enforced equality last?

Not very long, unfortunately—for some would match coins with a couple of total strangers, some would buy street cars from plausible slickers and vast numbers more would toss their money away without ever stopping to think whether or not they could afford it.

Very soon indeed we would be right back where we were before the distribution was made.

REASON FOR BOY'S HANGING 'UNKNOWN'

ASTORIA, July 7.—(AP)—Rodney Sundquist, 9, Portland, who was found last Saturday hanging by his neck from a wall roller towel, died "by strangulation, cause and reason unknown," a coroner's jury found yesterday.

An uncle recalled that the boy, who had been visiting his grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. John Sundquist, of Seaside, had remarked several days previously that he wondered if a person could strangle himself with his own hands.
