WINCHESTER BAY WHARF NEED EYED

The Douglas county court will immediately investigate the cost of constructing a new wharf at Winchester Bay to replace the present reported today. Judge Clough and lapse, County Judge Huron Clough reported today. Judge Clough and Commissioner H. B. Roadman inspected the wharf yesterday.

"Heretofore the county only has maintained wharfs and docks connected to the road system," Judge Clough said. "At Winchester Bay, however, a somewhat different situation must be considered. There is a large industry dependent upon the wharf. Crabbing, deep sea fishing, etc., furnish livelihood to a major portion of the people of Winchester Bay, and naturally a wharf for loading and unloading and for securing fishing boats is a necessity."

Judge Clough stated that he doubts that the county will have money to build the structure immediately, but plans to secure estimates with a view of providing for the construction as a special item in the budget for the coming year.
