ELKS TO CELEBRATE

The annual Exalted Rulers' night at the Elks lodge in Roseburg will be celebrated Thursday night, starting at 8 o'clock. The program will follow a short business session.

IDEAL TOM SAWYER BROUGHT TO SCREEN

The typical American boy—he doesn't sing, he doesn't dance, he's nobody's prodigy, and he doesn't suffer—comes to the screen at last.

He is Tommy Kelly, the 12-year-old unknown from the Bronx, who, wholly unknown, totally inexperienced, was selected from among more than 25,000 American boys as an ideal Tom Sawyer for the Technicolor production of "The Adventures of Tom Sawyer," now at the Indian theatre for a three-day showing.

The producer who discovered Freddie Bartholomew, is also the discoverer of Tommy Kelly, a boy who never had any special advantages, whose father, head of a family of seven living in a $28-a-month flat, had been on WPA relief for two years when the finger of fortune pointed out his son.

Like the typical American boy that he is, Tommy had never given any thought to an acting career. His mind was on baseball, he dreamed of the day when he would wear the uniform of the New York Giants, Hollywood was an unimportant place 3,000 miles away with a baseball team in the minor leagues.

For nine long months the producer combed the highways and byways of the United States for, as he said, "Tom Sawyer in the flesh, an untaught boy," whom everyone would immediately recognize as the counterpart of the immortal character created by Mark Twain.

Thousands of youngsters were scanned by talent scouts in cities from Los Angeles to Atlantic City. Rich and poor children alike were given a chance at stardom. Every effort was made to find the one boy in America capable of becoming the screen's newest child star. Without previous professional experience of any kind, Tommy went into the role of Tom Sawyer.
