LONE MARINER, 19, REACHES NEWPORT

NEWPORT, Ore., July 28.—(AP)—A 21-foot Newfoundland dory, skippered and staffed by John Osland, 19, Salem, made land here yesterday after being missing since Friday on a trip from Astoria.

The youth, whose sailing experience was limited to the down river trip from Salem, entered Yaquina bay unassisted. Six coast guard stations between Astoria and Newport were watching for him.

The coast guard had warned against the voyage and ordered Osland to equip his light craft with life-saving devices.

Osland, who was bound for Marshfield, carried provision for a week and landed with plenty left. He had only a box compass for navigation.

Lack of wind and dense fog delayed his progress down the coast, Osland said. He did not say when he would resume his trip to Marshfield.

OFFICIALS TO STUDY GRAZING METHODS

A method of converting logged over lands into valuable grazing tracts is being investigated today by the Douglas county court. County Judge Huron Clough and Commissioner H. B. Roadman left this morning for Astoria to inspect experimental work done by Clatsop county.

Near Astoria, Clatsop county has been operating an experimental nursery and has, it is reported, developed grasses and methods which have shown exceptional results. Seven hundred acres and as many lambs, 70 head of cattle and 35 head of calves have been grazed on one section of land for the past year, it is reported.

As Douglas county owns several thousand acres of timbered and logged over lands, the county is interested in methods of converting the land to profitable purposes.
