

BOB WHITE QUAIL "GOOD NEIGHBOR"

By "DING" DARLING Here's a bird to love, that's the only word for it. Whether we look upon it as our most popular upland game bird, or as the farmer's friend, whistling his liquid call from fencepost or thicket, emanating weed seeds and insects and coming up to the barn for its winter handout of grain, Bob White is a good neighbor.

In the first place, given half a chance, Bob White thrives in close contact with humanity. He follows agriculture and is now found in many regions a hundred miles or more north of the extreme border of his original range. The Bob White of the north is a bigger and sturdier bird and more brilliantly marked than his quail cousins in the southern states and Mexico.

The best friend of the northern quail was the old-fashioned rail fence which formed a zig-zag border between fields, a strip grown thick with brush in which wild life found food and shelter. With the passing of the old rail fence and the elimination of the hedge row Bob White lost its favorite unimpaired breeding environment and distributed in numbers. With the Bob White as well as with most other species of wild life, the population is more affected by food supply, nesting grounds and protective winter cover than it is by the guns of the sportsman.

Sleet storms, heavy winter snows with no provision for natural food supply or shelter, have been among the chief causes of quail decrease in the north and greatly aggravated by illegal trapping and shooting. In recent years methods of raising quail in domestication have been perfected so that restocking is a simple matter.

The family life of Bob White is ideal. Both parents are equally concerned with rearing the brood, and if the female is killed, the male will care for the young until they are well grown. In fact the domestic instinct is so strong in the male that "bachelor" Bob Whites have often been detected in the act of kidnapping of a young brood and carefully rearing them to maturity.

SUNNYDALE GRANGE LEADS IN PEST HUNT

Sunnydale grange, newest grange organization in the county, leads in the pest hunt in which the June report shows a total of 8,391 pests destroyed, according to Fred A. Goff, chairman.

The report for the month shows that grangers killed 13 coyotes, 970 rats, 1675 digger squirrels, 448 gophers, 212 moles, 13 owls, 76 hawks, 4 crows, 179 bluejays, 37 rattle snakes, 4 weasels, 320 snakes and 5780 mice.

Sunnydale, with 193,000 points, leads the contest with Kellough, 170,270 points, in second place. Other granges are: Riversdale 107,725, Gilde 58,025, Smith River 57,600, Fred Weatherly 53,075, Melrose 45,075, Sutherland 43,235, Loom Lake 22,950, Evergreen 20,165, Roscoe 6,100.

The pest hunt has shown very marked effects in territories served by granges. Mr. Goff reports. In localities where the granges are working on the contest, pests seldom are seen, while in unorganized territory they are many in number. Mr. Goff reports seeing 29 digger squirrels beside the roadway in one unorganized district. Presence of these animals, he declares, subjects grain growers to a serious loss.

MA BRITE ON HIKE TO PLEAD FOR SONS

SACRAMENTO, Calif., Aug. 1.—(AP)—The Sacramento attorney for her two condemned sons appealed to authorities today to stop Mrs. Margaret (Ma) Brite from making a futile trip to Washington, D. C.

Horace F. Frye, the attorney, said there is "nothing" the 66-year-old mother of John and Coke Brite, convicted Siskiyou county slayers of three men, can do in Washington.

He reported she left Salt Lake City, Utah, over the weekend-end with the announced intention of hitch hiking to the capital in an effort to gain presidential clemency. "The case is strictly a state matter and out of the jurisdiction of the federal government," Frye said. Mrs. Brite is only wearing herself out for nothing.

Governor McCall recently granted the Brite brothers a reprieve until September 23 so the advisory pardon board could consider their appeals for commutation of death sentences to life imprisonment. They are in Folsom prison.
