NEBRASKANS DEFY 3RD TERM TRADITION

Governor, 5 Congressmen Ask Renomination; New Deal Not at Issue.

LINCOLN, Neb., Aug. 4.—(AP)—A popular democratic governor seeks to shatter tradition by trying for a third consecutive term in Nebraska's primary election next Tuesday. Just to make it clubbier, all five congressmen, four democrats and a republican also are after third term nominations.

Despite the trial of "third term" psychology, the state's primary campaign has been dull and almost devoid of national issues. Gov. R. L. Cochran, who has done no formal campaigning, bases his third term bid on claims of an economic record in the state which advertises itself as "the white spot of the nation." Most other candidates, including Charles J. Warner, republican, speaker of the unicameral legislature, have joined Cochran in promises to "keep the white spot white" by no new taxation.

Bryan Scheme Hinted
Hovering on the edges of the democratic governorship race, however, is the potent name of Bryan, made famous by "the great commoner," William Jennings Bryan.

His brother, Charles W. Bryan, three governor himself (not consecutively) is not in the race. But his former secretary, Franz C. Raikes, is running and some observers have termed his candidacy a test of Bryan strength. If he runs well, they speculate, Bryan will make the general election fight a three-cornered battle by entering as a petition candidate.

The new deal is not an open issue in the congressional trials. Most of the democratic candidates profess friendship and a desire to cooperate with the Roosevelt administration.

Of the five incumbents, Karl Stofant of Norfolk is the only republican—and the only one unopposed. Drafted into the democratic race in his district is the veteran Edgar Howard of Columbus, frock coated former congressman and newspaper editor.

MEETING OF STATE SEED GROWERS SET

The agricultural committee of the Oregon State grange is cooperating with the state department of agriculture in a meeting of seed growers called for 1 p. m. Aug. 9 at Salem. Fred Goff, member of the state grange executive committee said today.

Mr. Goff is urging all Douglas county seed growers and those planning to enter this industry to attend the meeting, and asks that anyone planning to attend communicate with him.

The Douglas county grange agricultural committees have long recommended that seed growing be undertaken on a larger scale than at present, contending that soil and climatic conditions here are particularly favorable.

Origin of Word "Oregon" Baffles Savants After Years of Research

By JOHN L. WHEELER
AP Northwest Correspondent
WASHINGTON, Aug. 4.—(AP)—Years of research by tireless Smithsonian institutional scientists have failed to unravel the riddle of the word "Oregon."

Once the name of the territory which later became the states of Oregon, Washington, Idaho and Montana, it has presented an interesting but baffling problem.

There are three popular explanations, which Smithsonian etymologists assert are "most certainly wrong."

One of these is that the word Oregon was derived from Spanish "orejon," augmentative of "reja," or "ear."

Another etymology of the name "Oregon," which scientists said was "absurd," was that it was derived from the Spanish "horean," or "hurricane." This, they pointed out, was illogical since tornadoes were most infrequent in the Oregon territory.

The third popular explanation was that "Oregon" was derived from "O'Regan," the supposed name of an early trader.

However, a cursory search of records of the trading companies fails to reveal such a name," Dr. Harrington said. "If there was such a trader, he must have been too obscure a character to have had a great country named 'O'Regan's land.'"

Actually, Dr. Harrington believes, the name "Oregon" was of Indian origin. He points out its phonetic derivation from "good Indian" and minute study of Indian language might someday solve the mystery.

The name first came to the attention of the American reading public in the writings of Carver, when in 1778 he referred to what is now known as the Columbia river in the "Oregon."
