HATCHERY SOON TO FREE TROUT HORDE

Several hundred thousand Utah rainbow trout soon are to be released from the state game commission fish hatchery at Rock creek, Attorney Dexter Rice, chairman of the state game commission, reported today. Ordinarily, he reports, the fish would be held at the hatchery for a longer period and would not be released until late fall, but due to the limited amount of holding space it will be necessary to distribute them in the very near future. The fish are growing so rapidly that they already are overcrowding all available holding ponds.

A large pond is under construction at the hatchery but will not be available for use soon enough to permit holding the fry, Mr. Rice states.

Workers at the hatchery have completed marking 10,000 of the fish, which are to be released in Fish lake, in the South Umpqua district. The commission is experimenting with the planting of these fish and will station a man at the lake next year to check all catches. He will gather data on the growth of the fish, types of feed found in them, and other information needed by the commission in planning future distribution. The fish are marked by clipping their fins. They should be from seven to nine inches in length by the opening of the season next year, Mr. Rice states.

These fish, first released in the Umpqua river four years ago, are a close kin to the steelhead. The species, however, has been landlocked for many years and is believed to have lost its anadromous instinct. The spawning season so far has been changed from spring to fall giving a much better chance for survival of the fry.

PHEASANT RELEASE SETS STATE RECORD

Total Hatch Nearly 100,000 Birds; Job Gives Money to 4-H Members.

A record number of Chinese pheasants will be released in Oregon this year. Attorney Dexter Rice, chairman of the state game commission, reported today. While the hatching season has not yet ended, nearly 100,000 birds already have been hatched at the game farms and by clubs and individuals throughout the state.

More than 1,000 birds, hatched and raised by Douglas county 4-H club members, were released last week by Charles Lockwood, field representative of the commission, and E. A. Britton, county club leader. The game commission paid the club members 75 cents for each bird, making a total of more than $750 paid Douglas county boys and girls for their work.

Pheasant hens at the game farms in Corvallis, Eugene, Pendleton and Ontario districts laid 151,248 eggs, according to the report covering the period up to July 31. Mr. Rice reports. Of these eggs 119,917 had been set. At the game farms, 78,787 birds were hatched, of which 5,483 were hatched and raised by 4-H club members throughout the state and 17,920 by other individuals, sportsmen's clubs, etc. The game farms had 17,920 eggs in incubators the first of the month.

These figures, Mr. Rice reports, are far above any previous year, and releases should do much to restock portions of the state where the birds have been largely destroyed by hunters, predators and unfavorable weather conditions.

Even at game farms the predator problem is an important one, the report shows, as the statement he made that 516 predators, including hawks, owls, cats, skunks, weasels and rats, have been killed.

STEARN'S, EBERLE FORM PARTNERSHIP

GLENDALE, Ore., Aug. 16.—The Lutheran church building, located at the east end of Gilbertson avenue, has been purchased by H. M. Eberle and H. C. Stearns. Mr. Eberle announced Monday. A contract has been let to Lewis Metzger of Roseburg for repairing and remodeling the building, after which it will be known as the Eberle and Stearns Mortuary. It will be ready for use about September 1.

Mr. Stearns, formerly associated with the Douglas Funeral Home, is well known here, having worked with Mr. Eberle for the past twenty years in southern Douglas and northern Josephine counties. He now has chapels in Drain and Yoncalla.

The Lutheran church building has not been in use as a church for about thirteen years. It was sold to Jim Winch about two years ago and was used for some time as an automobile showroom. At the time of the sale to Mr. Winch, the church bell was given to the Old Presbyterian church, and it is now in use there, as well as some of the pews.
