RAILWAY STRIKE THREAT STUDIED

Roosevelt Urges Remedial Legislation to Prevent Industrial Crisis.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 21.—(AP)—Possibility of a nation-wide railroad strike complicated today the efforts of railroad management and labor to fulfill President Roosevelt's request that they cooperate on legislation to aid the industry.

Representatives of both sides discussed their problems jointly with the chief executive yesterday. Then they scheduled a meeting to determine whether the threatened strike against a 15 per cent wage cut would interfere with their following Mr. Roosevelt's proposals.

After mediation efforts failed recently, the carriers decreased the wage cut for October 1. Railway labor is taking a vote to decide whether to strike. The result, to be announced next Monday, will affect about 900,000 workers.

President Roosevelt told reporters yesterday, however, he would appoint a commission to study the dispute. Under the national mediation act, the strike could not take place for 60 days after that body is selected.

The commission would have 30 days to make its findings and recommendations. Labor and management would have an additional 30 days, described by government labor experts as a "cooling off" period, to study the report.

Mr. Roosevelt, concerned by the threat of war abroad and anxious to avert a rail tie-up at home, asked both rail executives and union leaders to cooperate in drafting recommendations for the next congress to help put the nation's transportation industry on a sound financial basis.

He spent two hours discussing many phases of the railroad situation, except the wage dispute, and then left the representatives alone to talk it over.

Some informed persons said the labor representatives felt they could not cooperate in the joint legislative program and fight the wage cut battle at the same time.

The carrier representatives were reported unwilling to revise their position on the wage cut until they had consulted their fellow operators.
