POET'S CORNER

This poem was published in The Portland Journal: SOMETHING FOR SUE

I wanted to write A sonnet for Sue— Phrased with dignity, Weighty and wise: But somehow a sonnet Wouldn't ring true: It stifled her laughter And shadowed her eyes.

Sue is not serious; Sue is not staid; Sweet as a primrose And gay as a breeze, Sue is a charming, Detectable maid, Living and loving With nonchalant ease. I wanted to write A sonnet The best Is far from being Her rightful due. But rhyme and rhythm, With renegade zest, Fashioned these verses To compliment Sue. Marjorie Hunt Pettit.
