

Sunday at the Churches

Daily Devotions

DR. CHARLES A. EDWARDS

If St. Paul had yielded to the temptation, which he may have had just the same as we, and stayed at home to rest that Sunday morning, the chances are that Lydia might never have been brought into touch with the little Christian group and been led to consecrate her talents to the service of the Master. Apparently St. Paul did not miss any chances of being on hand when there was work to be done, and perhaps it would be worth our while to question ourselves somewhat closely as to our readiness and faithfulness to opportunity. A good many of life's opportunities do seem to be just chance ones. If we have run away from duty or been careless about meeting it with readiness, we ask Thy pardon, Our Father, and may Thy grace enable us to be more faithful in the days to come. Help us, indeed to serve Thee in season and out of season, and may we never forget our responsibilities as Thy followers. Amen.
