Encouraging Signs

WE were thankful on general principles on Thanksgiving day—thankful for home and family, the hospitable town we live in, for this America, "the land of the free," for peace. But news from Washington last week has given us concrete reasons for optimism that we did not have on Thanksgiving day.

The first encouraging sign is that President Roosevelt in his message to congress made no attack on business and uttered no sneer. Another encouraging sign is found in the news that the attempt to ridicule the Dies committee off the stage had been abandoned by the president. This is the committee investigating subversive activities in this country, and it is announced that at last the department of justice is to cooperate in further efforts to expose those guilty of this shabby and traitorous business.

The third encouraging sign is evidence that officialdom is realizing that the polite weakness of Mr. Milquetant is not the way to deal with bluffing dictators. So far we have waited in vain for signs of firmness in dealing with the Mexican seizure of hundreds of millions of dollars worth of American owned oil properties, but that may come, and we must admit that the problem is complicated.

The appointment of Felix Frankfurter of the Harvard law school to the supreme court is encouraging and will do something to offset the national humiliation felt at the appointment of Hugo Black. Frankfurter is a liberal, but an honest and patriotic liberal, and it is doubted that the president could have found a stronger man for the supreme court.

And lastly, we find another thing to be thankful for in the hints of the Washington correspondents that Thomas Corcoran, popular known as Tommy the Cork, has practically disappeared from the policy-making group around the back door of the white house. Some sort of providential ferment seems to have blown the cork out of the bottle. Altogether the outlook at Washington is more reassuring than it has been for months.

traits in others, decided to try out a little introspection, and was amazed to discover that as soon as he sat down behind the wheel his attitude toward others INFERIORITY CHANGE FOR THE WORSE, becoming intolerant, impatient and overbearing.

This discovery was so humiliating as to lead to a resolution to observe rigidly (for at least a month) the rules of common courtesy when driving a car.

NOW here is an interesting fact: Whereas driving a car in an intolerant and critical mood had been a rather exasperating experience (especially in heavy traffic) careful observance of the rules of common courtesy and deliberate assumption of an attitude of tolerance for the shortcomings of others made driving a MUCH PLEASANTER experience.

CAREFUL studies indicate that more than HALF of all our staggering total of automobile accidents is due to failure on the part of drivers to observe the rules of ordinary courtesy and consideration for the rights of others. A little closer personal observation will soon make it plain to you why this is true.

MRS. JANE QUANT DIES IN SUTHERLIN

Mrs. Jane Quant, 80, died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. John Musgrove, in Sutherlin yesterday. She was born in Worchester, England, July 12, 1858, and came to Canada at the age of 30 years. She has resided in the United States since she was 35 years of age.

Surviving are two daughters, Mrs. H. H. Kirk, Ukiah, and Mrs. Musgrove, Sutherlin. Services will be held in the Methodist church at Sutherlin at 10 a. m. Wednesday, Rev. Perry Smith of Roseburg officiating. Interment will be in the I. O. O. F. cemetery at Oakland. Arrangements are in charge of the Stearns mortuary.

Around the County

CANYONVILLE

CANYONVILLE, Jan. 9.—Mr. and Mrs. Stacey Hayes and Mr. and Mrs. Jim Poole of Gold Beach spent the holidays visiting friends and relatives in Canyonville.

Mrs. Ruth Pardee is visiting relatives in Portland and Castle Rock. About twenty-five guests gathered at the home of Betty Ross Thursday, Dec. 23. The early evening was spent in playing games after which most of those present indulged in a taffy pull.

Betty Lou Rawor got her arm caught in the washing machine wringer Monday and was unable to free herself until it had run almost the entire length of her arm. She was taken to Dr. Lehnbach of Roseburg to have it cared for and was able to return to school the following day.

Mrs. Clarence Moore was quite ill last week but is much improved at this time. Lee Daniel shipped five hogs to the Portland market Tuesday.

A group of sixteen people met at the Bible Academy Saturday evening to welcome in the new year. The evening was spent in playing games. Mrs. Harriett Puckett, Mr. and Mrs. Mark Elliott, Mrs. Ralph Hawkins and son, Dick, motored to Winchester Monday to bring home June Elliott, who spent the holidays there with relatives.

Mr. and Mrs. Jim Hoskins and daughter, Jean, returned to Medford Thursday. Joe Hoskins accompanied them to stay a few days. A. M. Shaffer and several of the Bible school students, who remained in town over the holidays were dinner guests at the Mark Elliott home Sunday.

Mrs. Olson Ford has been staying in the past several days with Mrs. Victor Shaw, who has been very ill. Rowena Le Blanc fell and injured her shoulder quite badly several days ago. Her son, Oliver Le Blanc has been staying with her this week.

Floyd Easterday is building a new fence in front of his place north of town. Earl Sumner of Days Creek was shopping in town Tuesday. J. J. Simmonds of Glendale was a business visitor here Tuesday.

Frank Blattner and John Hamlin spent Sunday fishing in the South Umpqua river. Mrs. Dick Stehle, who has been very ill, is able to be out again. Carl Hill of Days Creek visited in town Tuesday afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. Max W. Kimmel drove to Corvallis Monday taking their son, Karl, Dortha Mae Elliott and Darrel Lincks back to college at O. S. C.

Mr. C. H. Davis and Mrs. Nellie Thomason of Drew were business visitors in town Wednesday. The Ladies Aid met at the parsonage Thursday, Jan. 5, with a small attendance. Officers were elected and other business matters discussed. Refreshments were served.

MYRTLE CREEK

MYRTLE CREEK, Jan. 9.—Lee Adair and Mrs. Edna Koke returned from California Thursday, bringing with them Mrs. Fancher and children, who will visit for some time at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Adair.

Norman McCurtain of Roseburg, visited for two days last week with his niece, Mrs. Ivan Daly, and family. Mr. and Mrs. Leslie Childers and son, Verdie, accompanied by Mrs. C. A. Riddle and small son, Floyd, and an older son, Irvin Egger, motored to Ponderosa, Calif., starting very early Saturday and expecting to return late Sunday after a short visit with Mr. and Mrs. Morris Maxwell. Mr. Maxwell is Mrs. Childers' son and Mrs. Maxwell was Verdie Egger, daughter of Mrs. Riddle and sister of Mr. Egger.

OUT OUR WAY

RAMBLINGS by Paul Jenkins

UNLESS one's attention is called particularly to it, he may see an object many times without having any well defined idea as to just what it looks like. I discovered this Sunday in the canyon north of Canyonville at the mouth of the Umpqua river. I have seen it many times indeed, but found it impossible to estimate just how badly it has been damaged by the storm which recently struck that section, along with others, of the Oregon coast.

But it must have been hit pretty hard. All the superstructure carrying the track for the dump cars is washed out, except for a section at the extreme seaward tip, and the long line of rock fill forming the jetty itself appears to have been battered down until only a narrow margin shows above the surf. A considerable sea was running while I was watching; perhaps there was more rock there than I thought.

A huge bell buoy had been torn loose from its moorings in the river channel, and was beached below the lighthouse, near the natural mouth of the river. It was a tremendous affair of metal, its base partially buried in the sand, leaning at a crazy angle and seeming forlorn and sadly out of place in its strange new setting.

For hundreds of yards the beach south of the river mouth (and I don't know for how much farther) was littered with a tangled confusion of logs, sections of wreckage from the wrecked boat, and debris of all kinds. To the immediate contingent of our party, wearing high heeled shoes, crossing this barrier became a real problem.

The storm was followed by sunny skies. The weather was warm, even springlike. The rhododendrons are budding, the buds already topped with a point of crimson tinge. It wasn't a wintry scene at all.

"That fellow," remarked a member of a chink-check group, indicating an opponent, "sure is lucky. I very strongly suspect him of playing with loaded marbles."

I saw my first bluebird of the new year near the highway at Winchester a few days ago. He looked like a little patch of summer sky that had fallen to the ground. If he migrated this winter, he must have got back before he started, which would be a neat trick.

Daily Devotions DR. CHARLES A. EDWARDS

There can be no noble living without high purpose and a face set toward all that is just and true and good. The good man must have a program of life with certain tasks and duties to which he is wholeheartedly committed, and, equally, with certain courses and ambitions and philosophies against which he sets his face like a flint. It can never be possible to attain unto high and noble life by merely cherishing a certain easy-going and good-natured wish in that direction, for such a life must always be an achievement, an achievement that makes demands and calls for commitment. An we begin upon the duties and the glorious opportunities of another year, we would seek Thy presence, Thy wisdom and Thy help, Dear Father, asking Thee for grace to commit ourselves to Thee. Amen.

WASHINGTON LEADS BASKETBALL RACE

Huskies Down Idaho, 51-33, While Oregon Loses to Cougars, 39-34. Washington State led, 14 to 10, at halftime. Traditional rivals battled in this week's schedule. Friday at Corvallis, Ore., Oregon meets Oregon State and Saturday at Moscow, Idaho, Washington State plays Idaho.

Ordinarily, northern division competition is listed in two-game series, but in traditional contests such as this week's schedule, games are arranged on a one-game basis because of the proximity of the rival colleges. The standings: Washington W. L. Pct. 1-0 1.000 Wash. State 2 1 .750 Oregon 1 1 .500 Idaho 0 2 .000 Oregon State 0 2 .000

ERB DENIES ATTACK ON LIQUOR PERMITS. EUGENE, Jan. 7.—(AP)—Dr. Donald M. Erb, University of Oregon president, said today he had made no protest to the state liquor commission against re-issuances of beer and wine licenses to establishments near the campus.

COQUILLE HIGH WINS OVER MYRTLE POINT. Coquille high school won its first game in the new gymnasium Friday, when they downed Myrtle Point's Hoebats, 38 to 25, in a torrid and rough non-conference encounter. The Hoebats led 19 to 18 at half-time through the accurate marksmanship of Dale Haworth, who took top scoring honors for the evening with 12 points.

HITCH-HIKER. GREENVILLE, S. C.—A bantam hen, pursued by a bulldog, dashed under Lebron Seism's truck. The bulldog stopped, bewildered, when the truck rolled away—there was no hen in sight. Seism arrived at his destination a mile farther on. The hen, slightly from a radius rod and nonchalantly began scratching for worms.
