POET'S CORNER TO ONE GONE The moon has risen, silver-white, And sunk beyond the hill A hundred times since that first night;

A mournful whip-poor-will Lingers the shadow with his lay; The dew-damp winds are blowing, And as you leave, your steps betray The manner of your going.

The moon has risen but to set, The whip-poor-will's brief song is hushed, And now I would forget That years are bleak and long. But in the silence and the dark The dew-damp winds are sighing, And every footstep leaves a mark Against the hearth's denying.

SIDE GLANCES By George Clark

"Wags! Those look like Mrs. Tipton's shoes. Take them back to her this instant!"

From Kipling's "Gunga Din"

Victor McLaglen, Joan Fontaine, Cary Grant.

Romance and adventure, comedy and thrills emerge in a whirlwind of impetuous, headlong action throughout the colorful scenes of "Gunga Din," sensational screen drama of British army life in India. The picture opened last night at the Indian theatre before an audience which responded enthusiastically to its vigorous appeal, voiced in the resonant crash of field guns, the dazzling glitter of polished steel, as bayonets and native blades cross in deadly hand-to-hand fighting, all etched in unforgettable detail against the exotic atmosphere of the mysterious Orient.
