

CCC ACTIVITIES GIVEN DISCUSSION

Foresters, Camp Leaders Speak on Safety, Work and Education.

The three principal factors connected with operation of CCC camps were discussed at a most interesting conference held this week in Medford, according to V. Y. Harpham, supervisor of the Umpqua National forest, who was in attendance. Others representing the Umpqua forest were R. H. Mercer, project supervisor; T. M. Barber and Lt. John L. Kennedy, project superintendent and camp commander of Steamboat camp, and John R. Montgomery and Lt. Cleo Mangum of South Umpqua Falls camp. The local group returned last night from the three-day meeting devoted to a discussion of education, safety and work program into which the CCC activities now are divided.

The conference, Mr. Harpham reports, was under the guidance of Col. Harvey H. Fletcher, district commander for the Medford area, and was attended by forest supervisors and their representatives, project superintendents and camp commanders included in the Medford district.

Special Training Offered
A very thorough educational program has been arranged for CCC camps, where young men, many of whom, because of financial reasons, have been unable to secure advanced education, may obtain special training in a wide variety of subjects.

Training in safety also is an important factor, in order to lessen danger to the great number of enrollees who have had little previous experience in the more or less hazardous work into which they are enlisted.

The work projects include such items as road and trail building, construction of lookout houses, bridges, towers, telephone lines, and many other activities of importance from the standpoint of public welfare.

Various phases connected with each of the three activities are being discussed at a series of 15 conferences being held throughout the ninth corps army area, Mr. Harpham stated.

The Portland office of the forest service was represented at Medford by Col. James Frankland, who is in charge of the CCC work program for the Oregon and Washington region, and by Ray Lindberg, special training officer for the same area.

Camps in the Medford district, Mr. Harpham reports, are under supervision of several agencies, including the U. S. forest service, national park service, U. S. bureau of reclamation, O. and C. administration, the states of Oregon and California and the general land office department of grazing.

LIQUOR REVENUE DIVISION CHANGED

OLYMPIA, Wash., March 17.—(AP)—A new distribution of liquor profits was decreed today when Governor Martin signed house bill No. 240.

Under the new law, 35 per cent of the profits go to the state general fund, 15 per cent to the counties and 50 per cent to the cities. The profits now are divided on a 50-50 basis, the first 50 per cent going to the state general fund and the remainder to the cities and counties on a population basis.

By the new law, it is estimated, will receive an additional cut of about $2,000,000 biennially, if liquor sales continue at the present level.

The state would keep the revenue from the 10 per cent tax on liquor sales. Another bill, as yet not acted upon by the governor, would add another two per cent to the tax on liquors.

CHAMBERLAIN SAYS OPINION SHOCKED

since the treaty of Versailles—a situation that ought to have been settled long ago.

"After all, the first objective of my visit was achieved. The peace of Europe was saved."

LONDON, March 17.—(AP)—British today instructed her ambassador to Germany, Sir Neville Henderson, to return to London to report on the treaty's absorption of Bohemia-Moravia and Slovakia.

Persons close to the government described the recall, which had been under consideration since yesterday, as a gesture of disapproval of the methods of Adolf Hitler's government in its eastward advance in central Europe.

They compared it to President Roosevelt's action last November 14 in summoning Ambassador Hugh R. Wilson back to the United States to report on the German drive against the Jews.

Ambassador Wilson is still in the United States. France today also manifested her concern over and disapproval of Germany's advance in central Europe.

The French cabinet approved a bill to give Premier Daladier virtual dictatorial decree powers for more than eight months to make France ready to fight at a moment's notice.

London and Paris consulted on a joint French-British protest to Germany.

Would Regain Prestige.
A French movement also was launched to send a special mission to central and eastern Europe to restore prestige in Rumania, Soviet Russia and other nations which once formed part of France's collective security structure.

British Prime Minister Chamberlain was expected to reflect a hardened British attitude when he speaks tonight in a broadcast address at Birmingham. He has no knowledge of Hitler's regret of Germany's emergence in an imperial role with almost 10,000,000 new Slav subjects.

These were some of the German acquisitions which the democracies must face: Full equipment for 40 divisions, including tanks and some of the best artillery in the world; vast stores of munitions and about 1,500 first line warplanes for his air fleet.

In a nutshell, Germany had wiped out most French and British efforts since last September to match German rearmament on land and in the air.

Reverberations Elsewhere.
In Sofia, Bulgaria, several thousand university students were chased by mounted police after they had demonstrated noisily against dissolution of Czecho-Slovakia.

The Swiss federal council, meeting to consider the changed map of central Europe, took cognizance of "certain signs of inquietude" among the Swiss people, a majority of them German-speaking.

Swiss Economics Minister Hermann Obrecht warned that "any one who strikes a blow at our independence and territorial integrity will encounter war."

In Rome, Italian Ambassador William Phillips sought from Count Ciano, Italian foreign minister, an indication of Italy's reactions and intentions in view of her axis partner's new power in central Europe.

In Moscow, delegates to the 18th all-union congress of the communist party declared Soviet Russia was ready to repel any attack, either in the far east or against the Soviet Ukraine.

They were particularly mindful of the Ukraine, Russia's rich granary.

their own ships materials purchased in this country, the chief executive suggested that his message of January 4 be read.

The president would not answer a question whether he thought developments in Europe might prevent the king and queen of England carrying out their proposed trip to this country in June.

Reporters asked the president what disturbing reports he had in mind when he told newspapermen in Florida several weeks ago that development abroad might cause him to cut his recent fleet review trip short.

The president said he had very definite reasons for making the statement he did and they were literally true at the time. He would not state the reasons. When asked if reports to him at that time involved a projected invasion by Germany of France through Holland and Switzerland, the president said those reports had been printed in newspapers six months ago.

BULLITT EXPLAINS U. S. ARMAMENTS EXPANSION

PARIS, March 17.—(AP)—United States Ambassador William C. Bullitt today declared the United States was building up its armaments because it knows "crimes against international morality are being committed every day."

Bullitt spoke at the dedication of a tablet on the site of the old Cirque de Paris where World War veterans founded the American Legion 20 years ago today.

"The United States, being at peace, believes also in individual and nations' rights to liberty and justice, is implementing its armaments so that it may not be defenseless should its institutions be attacked," he said.

Declaring that justice, freedom and democracy were fundamental principles of the American Legion, Bullitt said the United States government was attempting to promote peace with these same principles as a foundation.
