POET'S CORNER

THE RESULT OF RAIN

By Orpha Collins

Note: Written after reading the editorial in the Oregonian of April 1, concerning Miss Stoute's success in bringing rain to a locality in Florida.

Lillie is a spinster Who sat beside the lake; She promised the good people The rain from heaven to take.

She sat there quite demurely For patience was her suit; She had her umbrella with her And had it up, to boot!

Who ever heard of a spinster, Or umbrella, bringing rain? There are those who can't believe it, But it's true—not told in vain.

The rain from heaven descended On the umbrella, pitter-patter, And the weather-man is jealous! That is all that is the matter.

He's jealous that a spinster Could beat him at his game, But men are that way, more or less, Concerning any dame.

THANKS, FRIEND

MALINDA ODERKIRK

Adieu, my friend, Though I shall see your face no more, Your image lies within my heart, You taught a deeper sense of life To find, through paths of hidden lore.

To see God's face in tree and flower, To move on, thanks for this hour With you, dear friend.

And so, today, Within your heart of hopes built high I leave my lines to find a place, Perhaps, where they may dwell; And when It's time for leaves and birds that fly, Then I shall know they come to tell Me to remember and all is well, Adieu, dear friend.
