DOG SAVES TWO TRAPPED CHILDREN

BAKER, Ore., April 7.—(AP)—A little dog, and it is just plain dog, is a hero in the Morgan Hardy household in Unity, according to news received here today, for its accomplishment Sunday.

The dog followed its playmates, Joseph Hardy and Joseph's cousin, Elizabeth Whited, each 5 years old, around the Hardy home Sunday until the youngsters discovered an abandoned icebox and decided to crawl into it. The icebox door became latched and the youngsters were trapped inside.

Mr. Hardy missed the children after three or four hours and when they did not return home for their evening meal he started to look for them. Finally he came upon the dog sitting beside the icebox whining and scratching.

Hardy opened one door of the box, but it was the wrong one. He walked away and still the dog continued to whine and scratch. The man returned and opened the other side of the box to find the children almost suffocated and turning blue from lack of air.

PORTLAND, April 7.—(AP)—The proposed change of the primary election date from May to September got the endorsement of the Willamette Democratic society at a meeting yesterday. The vote in favor of the shift was 27 to 7.

Woman Who Guides America's 4-H Clubs Think Right Leadership is Barrier to Fascism or Communism

By GERRY DICK
NEA Service Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON.—The woman who guides America's youth movement—which is 1,300,000 strong and takes 50,000 new members each year—thinks there is no danger of either fascism or communism in this country as long as the right kind of leadership.

The woman is Gertrude Warren, who directs the famous 4-H clubs from her desk in the department of agriculture. A motherly, white-haired woman who has had the 4-H clubs under her wing since they were first organized 22 years ago, she says part of her job is to "dramatize democracy," and thinks it's the best job there is.

The 4-H clubs—the H's stand for Head, Heart, Hand and Health—are sponsored by state and federal governments, but do not resemble even faintly the totalitarian youth organizations in Germany, Russia or Italy.

Instead they try to develop young people as individuals who will be happier and more useful members of the rural communities in which they live.

Miss Warren likes young people and likes the country, and sees a lot of both. She regards today's younger generation as "a grand bunch of people."

"They're so responsive," she says. "They have so many ideas. I'm not one of those who think today's adolescents are the lost generation. I don't know anything about the lost generation as a matter of fact."

"My boys and girls are forward looking. They know it's a wonderful thing to live in this country. They know that even if they belong to a limited income group, they can improve themselves and become leaders in their communities."

It's next to impossible to get Miss Warren to talk about her own life. She starts off obligingly enough. "I was brought up on a farm myself. It irks me to have to live in the city for convenience. But I have an automobile and get outside Washington every hour I can spare."

Then she gets back to her favorite subject. "Today young people in rural areas have the radio, libraries, the cinema, traveling art exhibits, good schools."

"Youth has never had more opportunities than it has here and now. I can sell this country and rural life in it to young people because I am old on it."

Miss Warren loves to tell stories of 4-H boys and girls who have confirmed her faith in American youth. "There's one boy, for example, who was the son of a tenant farmer in a western state. Definitely in the underprivileged class. His father was shiftless and without account. The boy didn't realize that he could amount to something."

"We got him interested in 4-H work. He was so enthusiastic that when his father picked up and moved on, the boy organized a 4-H club if he didn't find one in the new community to which he moved."

"Today he is one of the 4-H club directors. He graduated from a state agricultural college, and is one of the most respected members of his community."

Miss Warren has dozens of stories about boys and girls who through the 4-H clubs have been trained in home economics, animal husbandry, gardening, canning, farm and individual accounting, dressmaking, forestry, music.

In the course of her administration, the 4-H movement has spread to northern Europe—Finland, Latvia, the Scandinavian countries. Though there are no 4-H clubs in the totalitarian states, Miss Warren recalls that several years ago Italy manifested interest in them.

On the subject of world youth, Miss Warren is of the opinion that "The best solution for the problems of youth is for young people and adults to work together, harnessing older experience with young initiative."
