POET'S CORNER

THE AWAKENING

By Mrs. Thomas Parkinson
The Master with a careful brush,
On Nature's canvas, wintry here,
Accompanied by the thrush,
Paints glowing colors everywhere.

The earth in frosty slumber bound
Awakens with a careful brush,
As if a magic wand were found
To unfold a richly treasure.

Noddy streams with flowing pace
Rain-drenched with April showers;
Sonnets hastening in a race
To cover earth with springtime flowers.

The crocus and the daffodils
Opening out in grateful glory;
The bluing sky, the green hills,
All take time to tell his story.

A matchless hand at whose command
Awakens earth to duty,
And paints for us a wonderland
