FIRST ENVOY TO U. S. HARD TO GET

Briton, After His Arrival, Attempted to Prevent Factory Building.

By W. B. RAGSDALE

WASHINGTON, June 8.—(AP)—King George and Queen Elizabeth, calling on President and Mrs. Roosevelt to foster good will between this nation and their own, are reversing in more ways than one the early British policy toward America.

The state of the present international situation is such that one of the unspoken, but no less keen, hopes of the British is that such cordial ties will exist between the two countries that if war should come a steady flow of American goods to Britain might be assured.

In the early days of the United States, the British not only had trouble finding a man who wanted to come here as minister but when one did come, he got very much excited over plans of the Americans to begin manufacturing some of the goods they needed. He thought Great Britain should put a stop to the manufactures of the venturesome young rebel.

It was not until two years after George Washington's inauguration Great Britain got around to sending a minister.

Many Spurn Post.

John Adams and Gouverneur Morris, speaking for the confederation of states, tried in London to learn why. They got three reasons: Such federal government as existed had no titular head to whom a foreign envoy might be accredited; its capital city kept moving about so that even members of congress had trouble keeping up with it; and the British government was having trouble finding a diplomat who would take the job.

One statesman after another declined the post. Many fearful stories were being circulated about the unruly mob of republicans across the Atlantic. Finally David Hartley, the minister to Versailles, after turning down the job himself, recommended his former secretary, a young man then stationed as counsellor of legation at Madrid.

So George Hammond, just turned 28, came to America as the first minister from Great Britain.

He reached the United States October 20, 1791, and presented his credentials to President Washington about a month later at Philadelphia. Hammond reported that Washington was "very tall, florid, and somewhat angular in person, his voice high pitched, but dignified and urbane in manner."

Hammond informed his government:

"The president received me with the utmost politeness and respect."

Opposed U. S. Industry.

Not long afterward, however, Hammond was writing of plans that were being worked out for the establishment of factories in the United States and urging that something be done to stop it.

"I have received information from various quarters," he wrote, "that agents from the promoters of this scheme are at this instant actually employed in the chief manufacturing towns of England for the purpose of enticing skillful workmen and procuring models of the machines which may be most serviceable in the manufactures intended to be established."

The promoters already had set up a plant at Paterson, N. J.

To defeat the plans, Hammond thought the British government should exercise great vigilance. He proposed a watch be set at all of the principal British seaports to stop the emigration of skilled workers to America, and prevent the development of industries in the new land.

PLAN BEAR RESERVE

KETCHIKAN, Alaska (AP)—Establishment of a bear reserve at Loring as a candid-camera "hunting" attraction for summer tourists is the aim of District Ranger C. M. Archbold and the Alaska Sportsmen's association here.

"Black bear are plentiful, and their easy accessibility will mean their extermination by rifle-armed hunters unless they are protected," Archbold said.

3RD TERM QUESTION CAUSE OF QUERIES

WASHINGTON, June 8.—(AP)—Third term talk, buzzing among politicians who have called at the white house recently, has brought only one outward reaction from President Roosevelt—a statement he was not responsible for comments made on his front steps.

In the latest doorstep remark, Chairman E. H. Birmingham of the Iowa democratic committee told reporters yesterday he thought he would "support Roosevelt if he can be prevailed upon to accept the nomination" for another term.

The third term question bobbed up shortly thereafter at the president's press conference, when Mr. Roosevelt was asked whether he had seen a magazine article in which Secretary Ickes advocated that he run again. The president said he had seen only the headlines.

Also asked about the significance of conferences with Iowa political leaders—the president recently talked with former Governor Nelson G. Kraschel—Mr. Roosevelt wanted to know why Iowa was being picked on when he had seen people from 48 states.

Today, former Senator Bulkley (D. Ohio) talked politics, among other things, with Mr. Roosevelt and when he came out reporters brought up the third term question again.

"I tried to draw him out," said Bulkley, "but there was nothing doing."

WALLACE MAY RUN FOR PRESIDENT

Will Not Oppose Roosevelt if the Latter Is a Candidate.

WASHINGTON, June 8.—(AP)—Reports spread on Capitol hill today Secretary Wallace of the agriculture department is about to become an avowed candidate for the democratic presidential nomination.

Congressional friends of the agriculture department chief, who said they had talked to him about the 1940 race, expressed the belief, however, he would not permit entry of his name unless it was certain President Roosevelt would not seek a third term.

Other members of congress said Wallace might seek pledged delegates who would swing to a third term movement for the president.

Talk of the secretary's candidacy echoed a recent visit to his native state of Iowa and other mid-western points by Paul H. Appleby, Wallace's assistant.

Appleby, former newspaperman whose desk has been the one closest to Wallace for several years, was reported to have sounded out democratic leaders about Wallace-for-president delegations.

The 50-year-old secretary came to the cabinet in 1933 as a republican who had supported Mr. Roosevelt for the presidency. At the time Wallace was editor of a farm magazine in Des Moines. His father, the late Henry C. Wallace, had been President Harding's secretary of agriculture.

Former Governor Nelson G. Kraschel of Iowa, after a recent white house visit, told reporters Iowans were "great admirers of Henry Wallace." He declared the state would "never be satisfied" with any candidate except the president or some one in harmony with his views.

WINE PROHIBITION MAY BE ON BALLOT

SALEM, June 8.—(AP)—An initiative petition to prohibit the manufacture, distribution or sale of fortified wines has been filed with the secretary of state. If 15,000 signatures of registered voters are obtained, it will appear on the ballot in November, 1940.

The petition defines the banned wine as any containing more than 14 per cent alcohol by volume. It was filed by C. H. Lauerman of Monmouth, and Frank Hrubetz, Henry A. Toelle, W. H. Walker and Harry S. Keefer, all of whom live on Salem rural routes.

ROSSER DECLARES INNOCENCE OF FIRE

PORTLAND, June 8.—(AP)—"I'm as innocent of that fire as you are," declared Albert E. Rosser, ex-secretary of the Oregon AFL Teamsters union, to a newspaper reporter who informed him the state supreme court had denied his appeal from an arson conviction yesterday.

"So they call that justice," the former union chieftan who is under a 12-year sentence for the burning of the West Salem Box factory, continued. "Well, I can take it."

FEWER CRASHES

Traffic accidents reported in the state of Oregon at the end of April totaled 10,513, slightly under the total for the same period last year when it was 10,624, figures compiled by the secretary of state's office revealed. Persons injured this year totaled 1,951 compared to 1,967 last year. Deaths totaled 90 this year, 17 more than for the same period last year.
