FIRE, the most destructive and most unpredictable of all of the many demons that plague us, does most damage when it strikes in rural areas. The annual report of the state fire marshal brings out this point rather sharply.

There is another point, too, that is important in this connection — though only five per cent of all fires in the state last year were in unprotected rural areas, those fires accounted for 40 per cent of the loss from fire.

In other words, though fire does not occur more often in rural areas, when it does hit the loss is usually total. Whereas in a protected city area it is seldom that a residence or business building fire results in more than a minor loss when the total value of the structure endangered is considered.

The fire marshal's report also points out that rural area fires are mostly in areas adjacent to cities and towns. We know all about that here in Roseburg. Most of our serious fires these last two years have been just outside the city limits. Such fires have resulted in total losses and some deaths have also resulted from them.

Rural area fire protection is not adequate. There has previously been a rural fire protection law on the books but it has not worked. The 1929 legislature, taking that fact into consideration, enacted a new law providing the necessary legal machinery for the setting up of rural fire protection districts with all of the powers of other types of taxing districts. Such fire protection districts have the right to contract with adjacent cities to furnish protection. The law is new and has not been put to use as yet, but it has genuine possibilities for good.

So far as the districts just outside the city limits of Roseburg are concerned, the really proper solution of their problem would be to become a part of the city of Roseburg. Both the city and the outlying districts would derive definite benefits from such a consolidation. This would be especially true if the additions were annexed to the city prior to the taking of the 1940 census. A larger recorded city limit population would give the city a better standing in matters of financing and insurance, and the prestige of a larger population rating in the 1940 census reports would be valuable in many other ways—not the least of them being the publicity.

And speaking of fire protection, it must be remarked that Roseburg has an excellent fire department. Its representatives at the convention in Portland of the Oregon Association of Fire Chiefs and the Oregon Fire Fighters association were active participants in that gathering. They brought the 1940 convention of the organizations to Roseburg. Chief Stephens was elected a vice-president of the organization and the contest team placed well in the evolution competition.

would be somewhat in Germany's present fix.

You'd be pretty sure that the first time you got into trouble your ravished neighbor would stab you in the back.

That's about what the ravished Czechs, who were sold down the river by the Munich settlement, will do if Germany gets into war.

AND from London comes the story that Britain's air industry is now turning out 1,000 planes a month and is six months ahead of schedule. If war comes (according to this story) Britain could lose 30 planes a day and still keep ahead of her enemies.

If that is true (and of course you can't believe ANYTHING that comes out of Europe in these days of tall bluffing) Hitler has made a mistake by waiting too long to start his fight—that is, if he INTENDS to start a fight.

LEGION JUNIORS TO BATTLE OAKLAND

The Douglas County American Legion Juniors will meet the Oakland Townies, an adult team, on Finley field Sunday afternoon in a baseball game which promises to provide plenty of action. The game was postponed from last Sunday, due to inclement weather. The local team had a very good practice session Saturday and Coach Earl Ulfrich has scheduled a game with a picked team from Yoncalla for Saturday afternoon in preparation for the third contest expected Sunday.

A nephew of Hal Turpin, Seattle coast league pitcher, will do the hurling for the Yoncalla team in Saturday's practice session, giving the local boys a chance to face a fast ball pitcher.

Sunday will see the Juniors decked out in the new uniforms, which were made possible by donations from the following business firms: Sunset Thrift store, Powell's hardware store, Henninger's Marts, Grimm's grocery, Pioneer Drug store, Beth's Grill, Hansen Motor company, Deer Creek dairy, Coen Lumber company, Douglas County Flour Mills, Umpqua Feeds, Umpqua Dairy, Pullman Cigar store, Texaco, D. M. Lawson, Economy Market, Fullerton Candy company and Si Dillard Motor company.
