NEUTRALITY LAW CENTER OF DISPUTE

Blaming of Act for Crisis in Europe Draws Fire of Several Senators.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 30.—(AP)—A new congressional dispute over foreign policy arose today in the wake of President Roosevelt's assertion that acute postponement of neutrality revision was a factor in the European crisis.

Mr. Roosevelt said late yesterday that he thought everybody believed the failure to act on his request for repeal of the arms embargo had contributed in a major or minor degree to the present tense situation.

The subject came up at a press conference when the president was asked to comment on a recent speech in which Louis Johnson, assistant secretary of war, declared postponement of debate until next winter had favored Germany.

Referring to Johnson's speech, Senator Wheeler (D, Mont.), said last night at Helena, Mont.: "Every war journalist in this country is in favor of our going to the aid of England and France in event of war. They would not only send arms and ammunition at the present time, but it wouldn't be long before they would want to send men."

"Apparently that is Johnson's idea in the matter. By minding our own business we are not contributing to either side."

Senator Bridges (R, N. H.) told reporters he had not noticed any signs that senators who opposed repeal of the arms embargo would change their position at the 1939 session. Senator Thomas (D, Utah), had argued that in event of a European war, congress would "throw the existing neutrality act out the window."

No Faith in Roosevelt

Johnson said he believed the present neutrality law should not be repealed under present international conditions, and added:

"I particularly would not want to repeal the law as long as Mr. Roosevelt is present. I haven't any confidence in the way the president has been handling the present international situation. His policy has been one of constant wavering."

Chairman Sheppard (D, Tex.) of the senate military committee expressed the opinion in an interview that "under no circumstances will we send an army into flight in a war abroad."

He said his understanding of the administration defense policy was that the military forces should be designed solely for the protection of the United States and not for operations in other countries.

"I think our defenses—existing and already planned—are adequate unless some new situation arises," he said. "Our geographical situation is still our most important defense asset, and, considering that, I think we would be prepared if conflict came."

When the present army expansion program is completed, Sheppard asserted, "the United States defenses will compare favorably with those of any other country."

U. S. PASSENGERS HELD ON NAZI SHIP

at San Francisco for a round-trip voyage to Vancouver, B. C., and Puget sound, had expected to be back home by tomorrow.

On the way north, the Portland called at Vancouver, B. C. The trip south was to be broken by another Vancouver stop.

Dr. C. E. Voight, San Francisco physician, and his wife and two children, were on ship. He was less enthusiastic than Miss Benjes.

"It looks like we'll have to pay the fines ourselves if we want to get off ship," he said. "Of course, the company won't be anxious to."

Mrs. Adair Collins, San Mateo, Calif., said "these German officers are just awful, about the war."

"They think war must come. Maybe not now, they say, but they're all so certain it must come—it's awful! But they're just wonderful about everything else."

commander of Allied forces in the eastern Mediterranean in event of war.

Poland called up new reserves estimated at 500,000 taking a serious view of concentrations of German troops in Slovakia, where neutral observers said there were more than 200,000 soldiers of the reich.

The government of Slovakia issued a decree surrendering its powers to the German military which has occupied the protectorate on Poland's southern border.

Polish to Be Consulted

The question of direct negotiations, London diplomatic quarters said, was raised by the German fuhrer's new communication.

Acceptability of British suggestions as a basis for negotiation was stressed this morning by the Deutsche Allgemeine Zeitung.

The British note obviously was not offensive to Hitler because, the newspaper observed, "the British communication was of a sort which made it possible for the fuhrer to answer."

Newspaper attacks on Poland of alleged atrocities inflicted on Germans in Poland.

Burden Put on England

Der Angriff, Propaganda Minister Goebbels' newspaper, declared editorially England must "find a way out" since neither Germany nor Poland can afford the widespread mobilization set off by the international crisis.

"With every passing day," der Angriff said, "the front of those who are tired of mobilization must grow, people whose personal, economic and national fate is no longer tied up with relatively small space of the (Polish) corridor and Danzig."

"The world is asking who, in the last analysis, is to bear the costs of such a world mobilization. Poland cannot do it, Germany is not in a position to do it, and England will, in the event of a peaceful settlement, not proceed to donate pounds to the innocent bystanders."

"If English politics try any claim to worth, they must find a way out."

This "way out" der Angriff reiterates includes "Danzig and the corridor, and to this objective demand we stick."

which was considered by the British cabinet today.

Whether a clear offer was made there was at least a suggestion that Poland send a minister plenipotentiary to Berlin.

This raised an important question as to whether Poland would enter negotiations with Germany in the face of fixed demands concerning Danzig and the Corridor and whether any withdrawal of German troops from the Polish frontier would be made a condition of negotiations.

The British cabinet adjourned without fixing a time for a further meeting to consider a reply to Hitler's communication. This was interpreted as an indication that Poland and France would be consulted before further action was taken.

Nazi Attitude Eased

Another indication that Germany might be agreeable to conciliation was seen in an authoritative statement in Berlin that the German government "welcomes with extraordinary sympathy" the offer of Queen Wilhelmina and King Leopold to mediate the Polish issues.

Great Britain and France already have signified their willingness to have The Netherlands and Belgian sovereigns act as mediators and Poland has indicated she would agree provided Germany did so.

Officials both in London and Berlin refused to disclose the nature of Hitler's message.

Informed quarters pointed to the exchange of communications between Germany and Britain as evidence of Germany's willingness to have the Polish questions negotiated.

War Preparations Go On

There were no signs, however, that any of Europe's major powers were relaxing their intense military preparations.

Even soviet Russia, which only ten days ago signed a non-aggression pact with Germany, disclosed that she had strengthened her military forces on her western frontiers.

As a result of the pact, which ostensibly would free Russia of any European pressure and give her an opportunity to turn attention to the war east, Japan rushed new forces through Korea and North China to the Manchoukou border facing soviet Siberia and Outer Mongolia.

The fact Russia had not yet ratified the pact formally caused much elation in Paris and was linked with suggestions Hitler might not have moved on Poland for that reason and because of other repercussions of the pact in Tokyo and Burgos.

Premier Mussolini's Milan newspaper, Il Popolo d'Italia, demanded the scrapping of Versailles.

This would mean, for one thing, revision of Poland's frontiers and return of certain areas to Germany.

The editorial was believed to have been written, or at least inspired, by Mussolini himself.

The semi-official Gazetta Polska of Poland declared that "occupation of Slovakia by German troops is a new act of aggression."

Express, Parys, referring to Hitler, said "if he wants war we can only assure that he will find himself involved in a real war."

Hitler was said to be standing pat on his hand, outlined in his correspondence with Premier Daladier of France, for annexation of Danzig and Pomerania, the Polish corridor.

The press, echoing views of officials, declared Hitler's maneuvers had placed responsibility for preventing war on Britain and France.

The corridor and Danzig, in any event, must be ceded to Germany, it insisted.

Acceptability of British suggestions as a basis for negotiation was stressed this morning by the Deutsche Allgemeine Zeitung.

CANNERS TAKE MOST OF PEAR MOVEMENT

PORTLAND, Aug. 30.—(AP)—Canners have taken the bulk of the heavy pear movement, leaving only a few cars of northwest Bartlett for the eastern auction.

Considerable tonnage, chiefly from Hood River and Yakima, sold at $35 a ton compared with $10 and $17.50 last year. Auction averages were higher with California reporting $2.52 a box for 1,603,318 boxes against $1.40 and $1.60 in 1938.

Car movements totaled 5254 on August 19 compared with 4752 on the corresponding date last season.

DYNAMITE KILLS 2 WORKERS IN MINE

HALEFAY, Ore., Aug. 29.—(AP)—Two young gold mine workers were killed at Cliftonville, near here yesterday, presumably by a premature dynamite blast.

Henry Day, 22, and his brother-in-law, David Smith, 23, failed to come off shift at the Union mine on schedule. Searchers found their bodies in blast debris.

FRENCH LINER GETS O. K. BUT REMAINS

be potentially liable if it allowed the ship of any nation likely to be involved in war to leave an American port equipped to arm itself at sea for offensive purposes.

Customs officials declined to say when the fuhrer would be granted permission to leave, but the ship's officers, turning at the slowness of the inspection, hoped to depart this afternoon.

While 100 federal agents searched the holds and cabins of the German liner—even compelling its crew to lower lifeboats and row them in a safety drill—the French liner de Grasse pulled away from its Hudson river pier unimpeded.

The de Grasse carried only 39 passengers. It has a capacity of 500.

GERMAN LINER TRIES TO HIDE IDENTITY

CRISTOBAL, C. Z., Aug. 29.—(AP)—United States destroyer to day was ordered into Gatun lake, near the center of the Panama canal, as a precautionary measure during the European crisis.

The German motorliner, Liepzig, tied up here today alongside the French liner Brotagne, which arrived a few hours earlier from Havre. The Liepzig was one of the few Nazi vessels to sail here since the crisis started.

Her stack, formerly buff, had been painted black and her name, formerly printed in large letters, was so reduced as to be visible only a short distance away.
