THE announcement made yesterday that the president is lifting the restriction upon the quantity of sugar that may be sold in the domestic market this year is an answer to the recent flurry in the sugar market which reacted to the benefit of speculators.

The beet sugar producers, who are most concerned with the sugar production control, have for some months been claiming that quotas permitted were too low and that United States beet farmers were being unduly penalized thereby.

Commenting on press reports that President Roosevelt and Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace are gravely concerned about rising food prices, including sugar, following the outbreak of the European war and their inference that such price increases may be the result of speculations and profiteering, H. A. Bennett, of Oregon, Utah, president of the United States Beet Sugar Association, declared that either beet sugar processors or sugar beet growers were benefiting by sugar price advances.

Mr. Bennett further charged that the inability of the processor to protect the consumer against the speculator or to secure for the sugar beet grower a fair share of the consumer's dollar in the present situation results directly from an unsound administration of the present sugar act by the secretary of agriculture.

The whole present trouble, according to Mr. Bennett, arises out of the fact that the secretary of agriculture, by the fixing of excessive estimates of consumption and the resultant flooding of the American market with foreign and domestic offshore sugar, created a buyers' market during the recent pre-war period, thereby setting the stage for a speculator's market with the first signs of increased demand following the announcement of war in Europe.

Another factor which has had an influence on the market to play into the hands of the speculators is the fact that while Cuba enjoys a guaranteed share of the domestic market she was encouraged to withdraw from the market while prices were at recent lows in the hope held out to her by Secretary Hull that she would receive a further concession in tariff this year. She is therefore now in the position of having a large unmarketed quota balance which she can now market on her own terms.

The solution of the problem is through the immediate removal of all restrictions of sales of contingently produced beet and cane sugar to prevent unwarranted price advances and to protect the consumer against profiteering in this essential food commodity.

more so. Treachery plays a less important part now than in the centuries of the past.

(INDIVIDUAL treachery, that is, NATIONS can't be trusted much farther now than when the world was younger. Example: Spain beckoning Britain and France on with one hand while signing up with Hitler with the other.)

ONE of the great military exploits of all time was Hannibal's expedition over the Alps into Italy, where, without support from home (Carthage), living on the edge of the country, with an army always smaller than that of his opponents, he terrorized Rome for years—although he FAILED in the end.

The story of Hannibal's campaign is a story of treachery from its beginning to its close. Cities and tribes who feared him deserted their allies without warning and joined him. Individual traitors opened city gates to him. Other individual traitors opened city gates to his enemies, thus betraying him. At home, his enemies were successful in withholding support for him. It is a sickening tale of human frailty and human faithlessness.

War isn't a very creditable enterprise now. If you will read again the record of Hannibal's Italian campaign in the late years of the third century before Christ, you will be forced to the conclusion that it NEVER WAS a very creditable enterprise.

F. R. SEES NEED OF PRICE INCREASES

WASHINGTON, Sept. 12.—(AP)—Disinfecting commodity price increases in the light of the present European situation, President Roosevelt said today the present world price of cotton was so low the south would go broke on it.

The administration, he told in a press conference, was trying to bolster the income of producers through soil erosion and export subsidy programs. The price, he added, should go up in spite of the big carry-over. As for wheat, Mr. Roosevelt said the existing price was below parity. He said parity, however, was not going to be $2, $3, or $5, but he believed, somewhere around $1.15 to $1.20.

Fire Warden John Klinead's office still had no official report on the blaze which burned at least three houses as well as uncounted summer cabins, barns, machine sheds, other farm buildings, firewood, hay and fences.

County school superintendent H. H. Wardrip and Harry Kolbo, who had to race through a blazing field to reach safety, were convalescing from severe burns. Wardrip will be unable to resume his official duties for several days.

Victor Boehl, grange master who saw the start of two separate fires, declared "without question they were set."

NEW PURSUIT PLANE BEING TRIED OUT

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 12.—(AP)—A swift, new Vultee interceptor-pursuit plane, designed for the United States war department, was being put through test flights today.

Vance Broese, test pilot, was using a sound movie device which photographs the dial and records his comments on the ship's performance in flight, giving him full use of his hands which otherwise might be hampered by note taking.
