Daily Devotions

DR. CHARLES A. EDWARDS

In a world gone berserk, it is indeed very gratifying to Americans that each of us may be the governor of his choice of religious beliefs; that we are a part of a nation whose creation is steering us safely through the muddy rapids that are crisscrossed with the fumes and poison of paganism, hedonism, atheism, and the propaganda of false gods. We all are, I believe, truly grateful that it has been our fortune to be cast under the sheltering arms of a government that abhors intolerance and bigotry; one that permits us man through legislation to condemn or ridicule another because of his religious belief. That, in my humble opinion, is the important and essential principle of religious liberty. Because Americans have been so fortunate in this respect, it sometimes is difficult for them to realize that there was a time, for a period of many long years, when their forefathers, the first American settlers, did not believe in such a principle of religious liberty. Let us think of it, so far as the United States is concerned, the battle for religious liberty has been won, Amen.

BARBS

H. G. Wells says this is just a continuation of the war of 1914-18. Then, again, it may be the Northern Division Conference playoffs of the war waged in Spain these last three years.

The report is still unconfirmed that the Bremen was last seen floating in the Great Salt Lake.

A Massachusetts town forbids children to being applied to the teacher. Next thing we know they won't let them put frogs and mice in her desk.

This can be no lightning war, for either has already happened to strike more than once at Warsaw.

Army officials are rushing the Bergdoll case to trial as they want no draft dodging cases from the last war holding over into the new war.

Massachusetts will license smokers who roll their own and evade cigar taxes. No action has been figured out against those who pick up stubs.

It has been discovered that the Romans ate sandwiches. This is not hard to believe, for how could a gladiator contest have a success without hot dogs?

The U. S. is leaving its troubles putting adequate defenses around the Panama Canal. Too bad we can't arrange for a corridor down through Central America.

Nations can figure out what has happened to the Bremen. Of course, they've only been looking for it on top of the ocean.
