POET'S CORNER

CHRISTMAS VARIETY SHOPPERS

By Orpha Collins.

One man bought a fur coat,
For he had a thousand dollars;
One man bought a mouse-trap,
For to save the family's collars.
One bought a fine car,
For his wife to pass the neighbors;
One bought his son a hoe,
"So he'd have to work, he labors."
One bought his son a "sax,"
To make everyone glad (?)
One bought his wife some hosiery,
Cotton—and was she mad!
One bought a "teale train"—
But it for his son,
(But the truth of the thing is:
He'd always wanted one.)
Some shopped the good way,
Some shopped the bad,
It would fill a thousand pages—
The variety they had.
