Quake Aid Means Pardons for "Cons"

ANKARA, Jan. 5.—(AP)—Pardons for 15 convicts who earned respect and risked their lives to rescue more than 11,000 women and children buried under wreckage of the Anatolian earthquake of December 27 were recommended today by the government.

The men, all serving long sentences in barracks at the Erzerinc prison, displayed what the government called "magnificent courage."

They organized rescue squads and dug for days in the ruined buildings of the town, apparently hardest hit by the quake that caused an estimated loss of 45,000 lives.

The convicts administered first aid to those they rescued, and housed the victims in what remained of their prison.

A campaign for adoption of disaster orphans by wealthy families was begun in Ankara as the first trainload of 210 children arrived.

Damages were reported today from new earth shocks that toppled buildings in the Smyrna region, Samsun and Amasia, but no new losses of life were recorded.

The weather remained bitterly cold after a blizzard which followed the earthquake and was blamed for much of the loss of life.

CARD OF THANKS

To the public for cooperation and donations of clothing, food and toys for Christmas baskets. American Legion Auxiliary. Mrs. Roy Campbell, Secretary.

Wildlife Program Proving Its Value

WASHINGTON, Jan. 5.—(AP)—The first year's experience under the federal aid to wildlife restoration act has convinced those administering the program that its future operation will have "far-reaching effects" on the nation's wildlife resources.

At the end of the last fiscal year, the biological survey reports, Oregon was one of 43 states already eligible for participation in the new program.

Ira N. Gabrielson, survey chief, said that 37 states had suggested a total of 87 projects to the survey by the year end and that two of these were proposed by Oregon.

One provides for the transplanting of beavers from overpopulated to underpopulated areas and would be state-wide in scope. The other proposes the restoration of sage grouse habitat in southeastern Oregon. Officials estimated the cost of the projects as $4,899 and $5,200, respectively.

Federal aid to wildlife restoration was authorized by the Pittman-Robertson act and became effective July 1, 1938, outset of the last fiscal period, with an initial appropriation of $1,000,000. The act authorizes annual appropriations not exceeding the excise tax collections on sporting arms and ammunition and provides for their apportionment among the states on a basis of area and number of hunting license holders. States must contribute 25 per cent of the cost of their wildlife restoration projects in order to participate.

Gabrielson said that to complete all of the 87 projects would cost $18,819, but that only $943,932 was set aside initially and that this was to start 58 projects in 31 states. Final approval of the 29 others was delayed, pending further investigations.

Washington's Prison Warden, McCauley, Dies

WALLA WALLA, Jan. 5.—(AP)—James M. McCauley, a small town businessman who became warden and developed a reputation as a friend of the men behind the bars, died in a hospital last night.

McCauley, warden of the state penitentiary for seven years, had been in ill health more than a year and underwent an operation December 27.

In his years as head of the prison McCauley created a permanent program of sports, including weekly baseball, annual track and labor day ring cards and fostered weekly chapel programs for inmates. For several years he personally sponsored an all-star performance by inmate talent.

Only one major break occurred during his administration. Nine inmates and a guard were killed in a "Lincoln day" riot in 1934.

Downey Opposes Customs Nominee

WASHINGTON, Jan. 5.—(AP)—President Roosevelt nominated Paul R. Leake yesterday as customs collector at San Francisco and Senator Downey (D., Calif.) immediately announced that he would oppose his confirmation.

"I shall tell the finance committee," said Downey, "that the nominee is personally obnoxious to me."

The senator said Leake, as editor of a Woodland, Calif., paper, had written "particularly vicious" editorials about him during the last election campaign.

He described the nominee as a "bitter enemy not only of myself but of Governor Culbert L. Olson" and attributed his selection by the president to the fact Leake bore the endorsement of former Senator William Gibbs McAdoo.

Associates of Downey said that by opposing confirmation the senator hoped to assert his control over federal patronage in California, a role in which he has had little apparent success since entering the senate.

Lions Present Decoration Prize Cup to V. J. Micelli

V. J. Micelli was the guest of the Roseburg Lions club at its dinner meeting Wednesday evening at Carl's Tavern. He won the silver cup awarded annually for the best exterior Christmas decoration for the club by Lion President Bill Goodwin. Members of the club expressed gratification at the number of displays made in Roseburg this year, and it is believed that interest in this phase of the holiday celebration will increase during the coming years.

The Lions are conducting their annual membership drive during the month of January. Everett J. Wimer, A. J. Ellison and Tommy Atkins were appointed to the membership committee for the duration of the drive. It is believed that the thirty-one per cent increase made in January, 1939, will be surpassed this month.

Snowbound

LAKE ALPINE, Calif.—Harry and Arthur Shinke, mountain resort caretakers, drove through a heavy snowstorm to free a snow-bound motorist.

But while they worked their own automobile became hopelessly imbedded, so they went home on skis. They'll go back next spring to retrieve their car.
