Sub-Zero Wave Chills Lost of United States

low at Big Savage in the western mountains, but they were moderating today.

There was light snow in southern New England, where ground temperatures ranged down to 17 below.

Mid-West Also Frozen

Unrelenting Arctic blasts also decreed another day of sub-zero chill for the midwest and beat down the mercury below the freezing level virtually everywhere except the Gulf states.

The bitter cold which swept in from the Canadian northwest has advanced from the Rockies to the Appalachian region. Little relief was expected until next week.

Grain dealers feared damage to winter wheat and rye. Livestock and fruit and vegetable crops in Texas were periled by snow, ice and sub-freezing temperatures that extended from the panhandle to the coast. Many midwestern schools were closed.

Many Fires Caused

The intense cold was blamed for many fires as householders added fuel to over-taxed stoves. Sales of winter clothing and fuel increased. Consumption of electricity city and gas spurred. Public transportation facilities in Chicago were strained as thousands of motorists, bothered with balky motors, took to the buses and trains. Nine persons were injured there last night when two elevated trains collided.

Virtually all of Montana suffered from sub-zero cold. It was 35 at Butte yesterday. A frank gale ripped off roofs and uprooted trees in the White River valley in Washington.

San Francisco's minimum of 38.5 degrees yesterday was its lowest for the date in 18 years. The usually mild Imperial valley had a temperature of 32.

A truck driver rescued Otto Kerkel, 24, of Lusk, Wyo., after he had spent seven hours in an unheated car which stalled in 21 degrees below zero weather.

Three Colorado highway workers who suffered frostbite and exposure after taking refuge in an empty farmhouse were reached by a rescue crew on a tractor snow plow.

Cold Route Dogs

Whitefish Bay, Wis., police said it was so cold there that stray dogs disappeared from the streets. The temperature in nearby Milwaukee early today was -15.

Hobart Wallis, 29, a barefoot hitchhiker was treated for frozen hands and feet at Bedford, Ind. He was found seeking shelter in a hollow log. Two exposure deaths were reported in Indiana.

James Whitley, 21, a Charlevoix, Mich., hunter, crawled for two miles through snow and sub-zero cold after breaking an ankle. In Detroit the mercury sank below zero for the first time since 1936.

Ice Chokes Rivers

Pittsburgh suffered its coldest weather of the season. It was -2 at 2 a. m. A five-mile long ice gorge 85 miles up the Allegheny river carried threats of a flood. At Philadelphia engineers were concerned over the worst ice gorge in 40 years in the Schuylkill river.

Heavy ice floes halted operations of Ohio river ferriesboats at Owensboro, Ky. U. S. engineers warned tow-boats and other river craft to seek shelter immediately. A light snowfall covered Washington yesterday. The capital prepared for zero weather tonight.

NORTHERN OREGON GETS LIGHT MANTLE OF SNOW

PORTLAND, Jan. 19.—(AP)—Oregon turned up its collar against chill temperatures today and a powdery snow, the first of the year, fell lightly in Portland.

The Oregon Motor association reported light snow falling in eastern Oregon along the Old Oregon Trail highway from Arlington to Baker. Similar conditions prevailed at Government Camp on the Mount Hood loop highway and at Timberline.

No highways not previously closed by winter conditions restricted traffic.

Overcast skies will prevail in most of Oregon this week-end, the government observation station said, with light rain or snow in the west and snow over the mountains.

per and Finnish skiers, Soviet Russia's Salla army—heretofore the most successful of the war—was reported fighting a fierce battle at Markajarvi to protect the retreat of 40,000 men toward the Russian border, still 50 miles away.

Whether the main body of Russians was not clear.

The terse Finnish communiqué said, "our troops have advanced 45 kilometers (about 28 miles) in the Salla sector during the past few days. The enemy has been pushed back from Juostjärvi to Markajarvi, for possession of which fighting is proceeding."

Finnish ski patrols, repeatedly cutting off Russian supplies, were credited with forcing the Russians into a retreat complicated by the severest winter in more than a half century.

Temperatures of 50 degrees below zero Fahrenheit were common. A temperature of 58 below was recorded at Niekky, northeast of Helsinki.

Horse Flesh, Bark Eaten

A Finnish detachment, which reported occupation of a Russian camp in the Salla area shortly after the red army's departure, said flesh had been sliced from dead horses, apparently for food, and that the bark was gnawed from trees, probably by horses seeking fodder.

It was reported officially today that in raids on southern Finland yesterday Soviet planes dropped 300 bombs and that attempts were made to machine-gun persons in several communities.

Damage was reported slight, however, and no loss of life was recorded.

U. S. Aid Funds Used

A central committee headed by Finland's former Premier Cajander is administering relief funds raised by the United States committee of which former President Herbert Hoover is chairman.

Six hundred thousand dollars of these funds already have reached Finland and are being used for clothing and food for more than 500,000 refugees from the war zone.

Russia Apologizes

Russia apologized both to Sweden and Norway for violations of their territory by Russian fliers, according to an official announcement.

Sweden had protested against the alleged bombing last Sunday of Kallaks island on the far side of the Gulf of Bothnia from Finland. Russia's reply failed to mention any bombing, but acknowledged Russian aircraft had flown over the island when lost in a snowstorm. Regret was expressed.

"Regret at these happenings" also was tendered Norway in reply to her protest Russian planes had flown over Norwegian territory between Jan. 12 and 14 and one had landed. Russia explained "extremely unfavorable atmospheric conditions" were responsible.

DANES VOTE NEUTRALITY; NEIGHBORS "WAITING"

COPENHAGEN, Jan. 19.—(AP)—The lower house of Denmark's parliament voted overwhelmingly today its approval of a declaration that this country intends both to maintain and defend its neutrality in Europe's conflicts.

The declaration was framed by the six largest political parties in the country partly to offset an impression abroad that Denmark would not resist an attack on its territorial integrity.

The vote was 135 to 0, but there was one abstention. Jens Moeller, elected by the German minority in Schleswig, refrained as he customarily does in matters involving Danish foreign policy on the grounds he is not Danish. He is the lone German minority member in Denmark's lower house.

With opinion growing in Scandinavia that a Finnish defeat might mean a swifter invasion of the northern countries, the outspoken criticism of Sweden's neutral stand by her former foreign minister, Sandler, and the "defense league" suggestion provoked widespread discussion.

Liberal and conservative elements favoring active aid to Finland were encouraged by the reply of Swedish Premier Hansson that "the idea of northern collaboration is by no means shipwrecked."

But the consensus of observers was that both Denmark and Norway, for the present at least, would refrain on the premise that their position was not fundamentally comparable with that of Sweden and the Swedish government itself held to a "wait and see" policy.

lacked shipping facilities or the rubber to deliver in exchange for the cotton. Some observers, however, considered it likely ship space was more needed for other materials from the United States.

Through the agreement, announced last June 26, the United States had expected to exchange about $30,000,000 worth of surplus cotton for $30,000,000 worth of rubber. The extent of transactions thus far was not disclosed.

The British ministry of supply declined to say whether the rubber shipments to the United States would be suspended.

Sabotage Denied

Although Scotland Yard's sabotage squad worked on the case, the government denied today there was reason to suspect that sabotage caused yesterday's mysterious explosions which killed five persons and injured 30 at the Waltham Abbey munitions plant.

The authoritative British Press association said authorities had received anonymous information several days ago that "accidents might happen" in the royal gunpowder factory, 12 miles north of London, and at others in various parts of England.

Roosevelt said such planning could prevent overlapping activities and had economy.

He used the Columbia basin as an example of what the board is doing, and he expressed a hope congress would in some way make provision for appropriations for its continued existence.

When the pumps at Grand Coulee dam begin operating, he said, it will mean that irrigated land will become available for perhaps 80,000 families and 20,000 additional families will be needed to operate facilities for the 80,000.

Ordered Planning Needed

Mr. Roosevelt raised the question of whether there should be some ordered planning of the settlement of whether a half million people should be allowed to go in and specialize in one crop, such as sugar beets, which would add to the sugar surplus, or apples such as were produced in overabundance on the Yakima reclamation project.

No one government department, the president continued, has the qualifications to make a complete survey of the economic and other aspects of planning. There has to be some small agency to work out a plan, he said, and that agency is the national resources board.

Planning Funds Denied

The house yesterday passed and sent to the senate an independent officers appropriations bill from which funds for the planning board, the office of government reports and the committee on personnel management had been eliminated on the ground those agencies, set up by the president, had no legal existence.

The president said he hoped all would be taken care of, particularly since their total appropriations were very small—altogether amounting to about half of what one commercial ship would cost.

Previously the president had expressed the hope congress would enact legislation authorizing the agencies to continue their work and follow that up with funds for them.

The resources planning board and the committee on personnel management, the chief executive said today, are both money saving agencies.
