POET'S CORNER

PREPAREDNESS
By ALDEN HAINES
Over misty mountain, hills and vales,
Over France and over Spain and Wales
An airplane swiftly flew through skies afar
And landed on the isle of Zanzibar,
Where the American, which it had brought,
Was very near by a large lion caught.
Up a lofty tree this nimble Yankee swung,
Just out of reach, with legs wrapped round a limb,
Above the lion, looking up at him,
In a tantalizing way he downward hined,
Then with his revolver pumped the lead
Into the great beast till he fled.
Lung the young man sat there thinking how,
If we would prepare for war far better now,
We would never fall upon our coasts
To defeat invading foreign hordes
And to ever keep our country free
From all forms of foreign tyranny.
