WHEN the News-Review editor, and wife, left Roseburg a month ago to go across the country to the east coast there were unmistakable signs of spring in the Umpqua valley.

We ran into winter before we reached Omaha and caught up with a good old winter blizzard in Chicago. We had planned to stop over a day in Chicago but were unprepared for the weather so hastened on.

Stopping in Washington, D. C., where, because it is pretty well south, we expected some moderation, we found the weatherman doing his tricks also. It was unusually cold with a freezing biting wind that was most unpleasant.

On up to New York City—we were prepared for anything. By the time we were settled in a hotel a blizzard had kicked up its heels all over Manhattan. The streets and sidewalks were slushy. It was winter there, and no mistake.

Everywhere, we were most courteously assured by taxi drivers such weather was MOST unusual. Unusual or not, it "warned" the way we heard it—we knew that it was spring and balmy back here where we came from.

Our first plan which was to hurry back home from Detroit over U. S. highway 30 was discarded even before we reached Cheyenne—too much snow, though the highway was clear. So when we came back to Detroit (via train) we had determined to head south—at least far enough to reach early spring weather again. As we headed south, studying maps our compromise decision was to return via U. S. 66—across southern Missouri, Oklahoma, the northern tip of Texas, New Mexico and Arizona into southern California. It was a perfect decision—so far as weather was concerned—in fact it was perfect in every way.

It was early spring by the time we reached St. Louis and by the time southern California came along it was nearly summer. The overcoat was discarded somewhere in Oklahoma and has been unused since.

This is a great and marvelous country of ours where we can enjoy almost any season at will within a few hours.

doing a good business.

IN Phoenix, incidentally, the motor camp has been erected to a point of development not equaled anywhere else in the country. You can find anything you want, from roadside "cabins" to luxurious caravansaries with accommodations approximating those of the best hotels.

At El Paso, the motor camp, comparatively unknown in the Mid West, begins to flower, coming to its fullest and most luxuriant bloom at Phoenix.

T to the east of Phoenix, citrus growing (with the emphasis always on grapefruit) is both an industry and way of living—that is to say, beautiful homes, much to elaborate to have been earned out of the soil, are buried in the emerald-green and gold citrus groves. It is obvious that well-to-do people live in these homes, perhaps supporting the marvelously kept orchards with money earned in other ways.

Westward from Phoenix to the rim of the valley, the population of the farmer-in-overalls-earning-a-living-from-the-soil type.

EVERYBODY, of course, read of this cold spell, but you can't begin to realize what it meant without traveling the far south. In New Orleans, which is well down in the sub-tropics, being much farther south than San Diego, the temperature stood at ten above for a week and a half. In Baton Rouge, a few miles to the north, it was five above. Streams froze that hadn't been skimmed with ice within the memory of the oldest inhabitant.

Banana trees (without bananas; it's too far north for that) were frozen flat to the ground. The palms look as dry as hay. All tender vegetation was frozen down. The Gulf Coast quite distinctly isn't itself this winter.

It's hot again now, but it certainly must have been frightfully cold for a couple of weeks.

THE warm, bright, sunny Salt River valley missed this visitation from the polar regions entirely and is as fresh and beautiful as the inside of a greenhouse.

Capone Believed Back in Florida

MIAMI BEACH, Fla., March 21.—(AP)—Much activity and lights that blazed throughout the night led to the belief today that Al Capone might be behind the shattering walls of his luxurious Palm Island estate, kept prim as a needle for nearly a decade awaiting him.

The Miami Herald quoted an unnamed source as saying the former Chicago gang leader had returned to his Florida home, and Capone disappeared from the house in Baltimore he had occupied since January 8.

Dan Coughlan, caretaker at the Palm Island estate, denied that Capone was here and refused admittance to newsmen.

Under Florida law, Capone must register as a former felon within 48 hours of his arrival.

In Baltimore, Dr. Joseph E. Moore, widely-known syphilologist who has been attending Capone, said he had not been informed of Capone's departure.

The so-called former gangster was discharged from federal prison at Lewisburg, Pa., Nov. 16, to which he was transferred after serving seven years at Alcatraz and Terminal Island prison for evading federal income taxes.

Canyonville Dances Set to Raise Building Funds

CANYONVILLE, March 21.—Members of the South Umpqua Rod and Gun club are anticipating a large crowd for the dance to be held Saturday night at the South Douglas Community building in Canyonville. The dance is one of a series sponsored by the Rod and Gun club to benefit the building fund. The Community building was erected four years ago as a WPA program, the sponsor's share being made up by donations from residents of the southern part of the county.
