

AGAIN! STOKELY'S TOMATOES TAKE THE PRIZE!

These prize-winners are typical of all Stokely's 112 vegetables and fruits

These vegetables and fruits aren't the "common garden variety." They're prize quality—grown from selected seed in tested soil, picked almost the very hour of perfect ripeness, then rushed to nearby canneries and checked for flavor, texture, color, size.

They must measure up to Stokely's high standards or out they go! That's why the Stokely label is your guarantee of highest quality.

Beautiful Roses Easy to Produce

Should be Kept Separate From Other Flowers, in Drained
Soil and Free From Weeds.

Roses, flowers of romance, come into your garden with a history reaching back into pre-Babylonian times. They bear a name that is identical in almost all the languages of civilization.

Most common are the hybrid tea roses that seldom grow more than two feet high. The hybrid perpetuals are taller, but bloom best when pruned to three feet. Climbing poynantha and floribunda roses follow in order.

Too seldom does one find the beautiful bush roses which are crowded out of the average garden because of the large space they occupy.

Culture of all roses is relatively simple. Good soil, neutral or slightly acid and rich in humus, needs only to be deeply dug and well drained. Roses will not endure wet feet.

No bed should be less than 18 inches deep. Its bottom quarter should be composed of a well-rotted animal manure. In the absence of manure, use humus and a 4-12-4 complete commercial fertilizer. Bone meal is the only fall fertilizer.

Roses should be planted in their own garden where they will not be forced to compete with other plants. Weeds must be kept down. The flowers do well in partial shade, but if roses are planted in the shrub border, direct root interference must be avoided.

Pruning And Pests
Pruning is largely a matter of preference. If fewer buds are left on the plant in the spring (except the poynantha and floribunda group) fewer but larger roses will bloom. Remove all winter-damaged or weak shoots.

Roses are attacked in the spring by green aphids, which are controlled by spraying or dusting with nicotine. Greenish sawfly larvae that devour leaves are killed with arsenicals.

Japanese beetles, rose chafers and other leaf eating beetles are checked by hand or by spraying with nicotine. Greenish sawfly larvae that devour leaves are killed with arsenicals.

copper and one pint fish oil in 100 gallons of water.

Destroy all plants infested with crown gall and disinfect soil with one ounce of corrosive sublimate in 75 gallons of water. General all-purpose sprays can be purchased at any reliable seed store.

Don't Wet Foliage
Roses like plenty of water. Flood beds slowly once a week so that the moisture reaches the roots. Avoid wetting the foliage, especially in the evening.

Spent blooms should be removed by cutting the stem above the first complete set of five leaves. Cultivate frequently and do not allow soil to bake and become hard at any time.

Remember that the roots breathe and cultivation permits the air to reach the roots.

After the first heavy frost, bundle the branches together and cut them back to about 18 inches. Mound the earth around the plants up to 10 inches, or higher if practical. Spread manure in the hollows between plants.

After the ground is frozen, a covering of straw or salt hay will keep it so and give protection against sun and wind. In the spring remove covering a little at a time and finally level the soil around the plants. Spade in manure. This protection is not necessary in the south or on the Pacific coast.

There are over 8000 roses to choose from. The following are recommended for your trial:

P. Thom, deep lemon; Etiole de Hollande, velvety-crimson.

Floribunda
World's Fair, black scarlet; Betty Prior, pink; Permanent Wave, deep pink; Summer Snow.

Polyanthas
Grass au Aachen, orange-pink; Cecile Brunner, light pink; Margo Koster, light orange.

Climbing Roses
Blaze, red; Doubleblush, yellow; Mme. Greindre Staechelin, pink; Dr. Van Fleet, pink; Silver Moon, white.

House Approves FCC to Continue CCC Camps

WASHINGTON, March 27.—(AP)—The house, refusing to curtail the civilian conservation corps program, tentatively approved today a $280,000,000 appropriation to assure continuation of 1,500 CCC camps next year.

By a teller vote of 134 to 109, republicans and democrats voted to override President Roosevelt's budget request for an appropriation of only $230,000,000, with a subsequent reduction of 273 camps.

The house appropriations committee had approved the budget figure but had shifted funds so that only 12 camps would be eliminated.

Representative Borden (D., Okla.) proposed that the CCC appropriation be increased to $290,000,000 but he was shouted down.

Nicaragua Would Welcome
U. S. Marines, Envoy Says

NEW ORLEANS, March 27.—(AP)—Dr. Adolfo Altamirano Browne, Nicaraguan minister to Panama, said today European power politics and the gobbling up of small nations had made such a deep impression in Central America that the U. S. marines would be welcomed if they came back to Nicaragua.

"We realize American troops will cross Nicaragua soil to go to the defense of the canal if it is threatened," he said in an interview.

"We are ready, in fact, to do anything necessary for defense of the hemisphere in this war, even to use of Nicaraguan troops. It's up to the United States to make the first move. We'll follow."
