"BUILD AMERICA!" is the battle-cry of the chamber of commerce of the United States as it approaches its annual meeting, April 29-May 8 in Washington.

It is a stirring cry, the imperative to build, in the midst of a world which is using most of its energies to tear down.

The chamber, a federation of business and industrial organizations including 1700 local bodies and thousands of individual firms, has set a magnificent goal for its sessions.

"New fields lie ahead—new fields for expansion, new fields for science and invention, new fields for production—opening wider vistas for the distribution of necessities, the comforts and luxuries of life to our entire population."

So reads the chamber's announcement, and it is true. These are our tasks, these our goals. The note is positive, the tone constructive.

Ten bitter years have driven home the lesson to all of us that there is no stable prosperity even for the very rich unless the vast mass of the people are prosperous.

It is scarcely to be expected that the men meeting with the chamber will suddenly agree that present methods of trying to attain the very goals they have set forth are ideal.

But the important thing is the goal. The important thing is that all agree on what it is desirable to achieve. And certainly such agreement on objectives ought to form a bond even between those who favor different means of reaching those objectives.

Sterile and unimproved picking on business by government agencies will not help. Sterile and indiscriminate opposition to government measures by business will not help.

The goal must not be forgotten in the midst of bickering over method. The chamber has well set before its members on the eve of the meeting those stirring words of Daniel Webster:

"Let us develop the resources of our land, call forth its powers, build up its institutions, promote all its great interests, and see whether we, also in our day and generation, will not perform something worthy to be remembered."

If this writer, believing that a republican victory is important to the nation's welfare, were writing the republican platform, he would include in it just seven words:

WE PROMISE TO KEEP THE NATION SOLVENT

If this nation can be kept solvent, all its other problems can be solved in time. If it can't keep solvent, BANKRUPTCY will obliterate every other problem.

U in Alaska the ice breaks in the Tanana river and two girls, Clara Hansen and Mrs. Lila Palm, win $50,000 by guessing nearest to the date of the break-up. Those who believe that all gambling can be stopped by law should consider a law requiring the ice in the Tanana to break at the same time every year.

Extortion Charge Faces Union Chief

NEW YORK, April 26.—(AP)—George Scallie, president of the Building Service Employees International Union (A.F.L.), was named today in a $25,000 indictment charging conspiracy and extortion.

The indictment lists alleged extortions totaling $87,150, with the victims including operators of hotels and rooming houses in New York as well as members of the union.

Named as a co-conspirator with Scallie was Isidore Schwartz, a union official, already under a separate indictment for conspiracy to extort. The Schwartz brothers are at liberty under $6,000 bail each on this charge.

Scallie, who in his youth served a prison term on conviction for white slavery, allegedly exacted tribute from hotels and union members, whose rank and file includes plumbers, painters and other low-paid workers.

Scallie, arrested last Sunday on the conspiracy charge, is free on $40,000 bail.

Pop didn't like things the way they were. It was a violin string stretched too tight. He was afraid. He wished the preliminary would be over so they could go to work. Outside he could hear the muffled roar of the crowd. Someone must have been belted a good one.

CHAPTER XXIII She went back to the stern of the Northern Belle and let the breeze blow in her face. He needed something soothing like that just then.

When Val finally went to bed she knew what she was going to tell Rodney Blair if he asked her again to marry him. She found it quite a relief now that she had made up her mind. She wondered if Rodney would be there to meet them when they docked. She had a hunch he would.

Val was right. When they finally slipped alongside their dock and were made fast, she saw Rodney Blair waving up at her.

Rodney wasn't the only one there, however. Sam Golden was so excited he almost fell into the bay.

A half dozen sports writers were on hand and a battery of photographers made ready to shoot the work. He recognized Tommy Evans from her own office and waved to him.

Once again she had changed into more feminine clothes, donning the same suit she had worn when she boarded the ship almost two weeks ago.

Eddie Cavalier was watching her when she ran down the gangplank and up to the table mounted on the deck. He saw her kiss him lightly and turned away. Turning, he bumped into Capt. Steve Hansen.

"Well, Steve, coming to the fight tomorrow night? Bring all the boys. Don't worry about tickets. They're on me."

He laughed somewhat nervously. Deliberately Hanson looked at Val walking off with Rodney Blair. Then he looked back at Eddie.

"We'll be there, all right, son. An' we're for you all the way. In every way, too," he said but this significance was lost on Eddie.

Eddie Cavalier was too busy trying to drive the memory of Val kissing the stranger out of his mind.

Sam Golden embraced him like a long-lost son. The cameramen were snapping pictures all over the place. But when they looked at Val Douglas she had disappeared.

Eddie swore at himself when he searched for her face at the boxing commissioner's office when they reported for the weighing-in ceremonies at noon the next day. She wasn't there. He wondered if she'd be at the fight. But of course she would.

He posed for the photographers shaking hands with Corky Briggs. Corky looked good. He looked bigger and stronger than when Eddie had last seen him. The photographers knew they were in square off together for a shot and Eddie wished someone would ring the bell right then and let them get it over with.
