Every state, county and city official or board that handles public money should publish at regular intervals an accounting of it, showing where and how each dollar is spent. This is a fundamental principle of democratic government.

IF the suggestion made in letters being sent out from the Roseburg chamber of commerce office this week and last week is followed several hundreds of thousands of men and young men are going to be might well pleased. Briefly the suggestion was that all state institutions, the army, the navy, the CCC and the veterans administration facilities provide turkey dinners for their people several Sundays this spring.

In this way a substantial portion of the existing cold storage surplus of turkeys will be used up and the consequent downward pressure upon the turkey market eased.

The local chamber has written letters to the governors of every state. Letters have also gone to the administrative officers of the other organizations. It is an ambitious program—a rather enormous undertaking but it will have at least some results.

One of the neat things about the whole idea is that its promotion costs the local interests very little—just some stationery and stamps and the time of the chamber of commerce office personnel. Then, too, as is pointed out in the letters, the idea will cost the various departments and organizations nothing extra, since at this time turkey meat is about the cheapest food to be found in the meat markets.

To our way of thinking, this method of relieving the turkey surplus situation is the right one. Unfortunately not all surplus commodities are susceptible to such treatment.

As of the end of March, the Commodity Credit corporation held title to more than 6,600,000 bales of cotton and 91,000,000 bushels of corn—the whole business worth, roughly, $70,000,000. In addition, farm loans are now outstanding on 2,600,000 bales of cotton and 460,000,000 bushels of corn, and before another year ends the government may be stuck with most of that.

"Stuck" is the right word. Situation is worse in regard to cotton; law says none of the government-owned bales may be sold unless the price received equals the money put out in loans, plus the carrying charges—which have been about $1,500,000 monthly. Practical effect is that it just can't be sold at all; even Federal Surplus Commodities corporation, which gives cotton away, can't buy any of it. About 600,000 bales will go to England in the barter arrangement for rubber. What will happen to the rest, no one seems to know.

If corn prices go up this year, the government may get rid of the 460,000,000 bushels on which it has made loans. If they go down, on the other hand, it may get the whole ball of wax. Storage charges, by the way, are about $3,500,000 a month.

a GENUINE IDEAL in a carload.

THIS cobbly practical purpose is back of all that one side is doing:

GET IT!

This equally cold and practical purpose is back of all the other side is doing:

KEEP IT!

AND still a lot of saps insist that sooner or later, for "our own protection," we'll have to get into this mess.

For our own protection!

The way to protect what we have, which is something precious, is to stay at home and see that no one takes it away from us.

Organization of Camera Club in Roseburg Planned

Amateur photographers of Roseburg and vicinity will hold their first meeting Friday night at 7:30 o'clock at The Film Shop to discuss plans for the formation of a camera club and to elect officers for the organization. The meeting has been called by E. R. "Zeke" Walton, temporary chairman for the group, who urges that all "shutterbugs" and embryo photographers interested in joining an organization to attend the first meeting.

The purpose behind the formation of such a club, as outlined by Mr. Walton, is to promote interest in every phase of photography, providing of dark room facilities for use by members, conducting of field trips, promoting of picture contests among the members and the holding of salon exhibits once each year.

County Health

A. N. Johnson, M. D., director Douglas county health department.

The president of the United States has designated the first day of May as Child Health day. He invites "all agencies and organizations interested in child welfare to unite upon that day in the observance of such exercises as will awaken the people of the nation to the fundamental necessity of a year-round program for the protection and development of the health of the nation's children." He also calls upon the "boys and girls of the nation to note the gains in health they have made during the past year."

For the two weeks ending April 27 the following tests and immunizations were given: At Looking glass, to which the Reston community also came, 35 were vaccinated against smallpox, 36 immunized to diptheria, 28 were given the Schick test to determine their immunity to diptheria, and 87 were given the tuberculin test. At Reedsport and neighboring communities 91 were vaccinated, 111 immunized against diptheria, 113 given the Schick test, and 306 the tuberculin test.

DAILY DEVOTIONS

DR. CHAS. A. EDWARDS

No life can be all romance. There are mistakes, disappointments, misunderstandings and vanished hopes. Many things tend to make life bitter: Physical pain, deformity, forced idleness, unpleasant work, defeat, sorrow, death, sin. Most bitter of all is the bitterness of sin continually wearing away the reinforcements of the inner life. If continued it is so easy to become seared and brazen and godless and bitter. God would forgive us that sin. What shall we do with the bitterness of life? Use it as a stepping stone to higher and better things. When the Children of Israel could not drink of the waters of Marah because they were bitter. They cried unto the Lord, and the Lord showed him a tree and when the limb of the tree was put in waters, the bitter waters were made sweet. God's grace is sufficient for every need. We may rise above the bitterness until the sting is taken out of it. Thus we may face any trial with God, do our work and in the spirit of Christ find peace to our souls. The cross will never be greater than His grace and He will keep in perfect peace those who trust in Him. Thus the bitter waters of life become sweet. Amen.

Veterans Council Plans Memorial Day Program

Members of the Roseburg Veterans council, composed of representatives of the Spanish War Veterans, Veterans of Foreign Wars, Disabled American Veterans of the World War, and the American Legion, met last Friday and made tentative plans for observance of Decoration day.

Levi White was elected as general chairman. His committee assignments were as follows: Transportation, Sam Starmer, chairman; parade, John Duer, chairman; memorial program at Indian theatre, Vincent L. Malone, chairman; Boy Scouts and schools, Bruce Mellis; national guard, Hubert Graham; grave decorations, Ted Post; publicity and radio, Roy Young; drum corps, Ray Tannlund.

Meetings of the various committeemen will be held at frequent intervals.

Sheep-Killing Coyote Slain at Days Creek

DAYS CREEK, May 1.—John Wright, Days Creek high school student and son of Jay Wright, prominent Milo farmer, Monday evening killed a large coyote which had run a band of sheep from the pasture to a straw stack a short distance from the Wright residence. The animal which at some time had evidently been caught in a trap as it was minus one foot, was cornered by young Wright and his dog and dispatched with a club. It is thought that in all probability that this is the same animal which has been causing severe depredation among sheep pasturing the Bland mountain, Lavadoure and St. John's creek country.

Mr. Taylor in Town—G. H. Taylor, of Brockway, was in Roseburg yesterday on business.

BLACKOUT

BY RUTH AYERS

COPYRIGHT, 1939, NEA SERVICE, INC.

12 when her mother and dad were killed in an automobile accident. Mary had no ties at home. She'd thrown her slim, vibrant self into the job of making a famed career as a fashion designer.

But in September, Mary, had been caught in the net of mobilization when Europe went to war. Fashions were forgotten.

It was at this turbulent time that she had met Vincent Gregg. She had gone to a party given by a young count who was closing his Paris villa so it might be used as a hospital for wounded soldiers. Vincent was among the guests. Mary would never forget the count's introduction:

"Mademoiselle, this is what you call in your country a dare-devil. He flew in the war in Spain and was invalided to Paris. I think he fly again soon in this war."

That very first minute, Mary knew that love had burst like a star shell upon her. In a world turning upside down, she needed someone to cling to—and Vincent had been the one.

At the start, there had been the agonizing fear that as soon as Vincent was fully recovered he would enlist again. She couldn't bear to leave him. With all her countrymen fleeing for home, Mary had remained in Paris to be near Vincent.

And then, just a few days ago, all had been changed. Vincent had said, "We're going home, darling. I've had enough years of barnstorming and flying for whatever flag offering the most excitement and money. I love you and I want to marry you." Simple and direct, just like Vincent.

Turning, she saw a regally slender woman sweeping in. Mary watched as the woman slowly surveyed the diners in the dim light of the blue-green blackout bulbs. The stranger's gaze rested, at last, upon Mary, then Vincent. Then as her glance met his in recognition, she bowed slightly and with a lazy smile, turned and followed the waiter to a table at the far side of the room.

The intimacy of the glance she had exchanged with Vincent gave Mary a feeling of vague foreboding. She shook it off. She said, "I think you're going to have a very jealous wife, Vincent. I'm seething at the way that gorgeous woman looked at you. Who is she?"

She noticed Vincent lacked his usual aplomb as he answered, flurried. "Why, darling, that's the famous Carla Marchetta."

"Oh—and should I know who she is?"

"Heavens, yes. You've seen her picture often enough in the society columns. She's a rounder-upper of celebrities."

"And you, my love—are you one of the celebrities she's been rounding up?"

Vincent's black brows cae together in a frown, but there was a trace of pride in his voice as he said, "Well, I've been to Carla's house in Mayfair, if that's what you mean."

Mary sensed that Carla's narrowed eyes were still on Vincent, but she couldn't be sure in the blue-black light. Nor could she account for the uneasiness that Carla's glance had aroused in her. With relief she saw the waiter approach with coffee.

Then her eyes widened. Distinctly, she saw the waiter slip a card into Vincent's hand. Turning to her fiance inquiringly, she saw Vincent glance at the card. His face was inscrutable when he looked up. Mary waited for an explanation. When he said nothing, she thought, "This is what war nerves do to people, I'm being jittery about nothing."

And then it happened!

The card, the waiter, even the glamorous Carlas were blotted from Mary's mind that instant. Real terror instead of an imaginary one chilled her blood.

Outside, a piercing siren wailed. It meant only one thing. The air raid for which London had been gearing itself for months was here.

"Quick! Run for shelter!"

It was as if everyone in the restaurant spoke in one voice. The dim lights snapped off and the room was plunged into inky blackness except for the beam of the hand flashlight pointing the way to the basement door.

As Mary rushed toward the doorway something fluttered beneath her hand. Unaware of what it was or what she did, she brushed it aside.

Then she reached for Vincent's hand. He was not at her side. "Vincent!" she gasped. "Vincent!"

Outside, the siren continued its screaming warning. It beat in Mary's ears. Trembling, breathless she was left alone as the crowd pushed toward the stairs. Suddenly, her knees gave way and she felt herself falling—falling, into the gaping darkness.

Mary screamed. "Steady there!" a strange deep male voice cautioned. In the dark, Mary sensed a pair of unfamiliar arms lifting her and the rough brush of a trench coat against her cheek.

She caught a glimpse of a smiling face above her as the flashlight's beam paused momentarily upon her. Two other persons were watching.

The Danmoore Hotel Meets the Motor Courts in Price and Service

Mr. Ray Clark formerly associated with Mr. William Weaver in the Umpqua hotel of Roseburg understands the thoughts in the minds of those who wish to stop at hotels . . . but many have gone to motor courts because they can cut the overhead by doing so . . . this fact has caused the manager of the Danmoore hotel in Portland, Oregon, to arrange his rates and service so they are on a par or better (service) than any motor court near Portland. Two people may have a room and bath at the Danmoore for as low as $2.50 per night or a room without bath for $2.00 per night and this rate will include the storage of your car in their fireproof garage, that is free. Mr. Clark explained this new policy by saying we sell our rooms at motor court rates plus 100 per cent 24 hour a day hotel service. The Danmoore also has special arrangements for families, a family of four, two adults and two children, may have two rooms with bath for $4.00 per day . . . the same arrangement for four adults would be $4.50 per day . . . stop at the Danmoore while in Portland and slap old-man over head in the face . . . the Danmoore is on 12th and S. W. Morrison street.

The roar of the crowd... the thundering hoofs foretold the fall of mighty Rome—all because an empire went pleasure-mad and forgot what made it great. Rome went soft.

All play and no work has always spelled collapse—for a person as well as a nation. Isn't a balanced life with a fair share of work and a fair share of leisure more sensible and satisfying? Then tasks become attractive—and there's still ample time for your hobbies, family and friends. They help you readjust your perspective... revitalize your good humor... rest your mind and body. Good work puts you in a mood for recreation, and healthful re-creation puts you back in the mood for work. Your moderation puts you in balance and in harmony with progress.
