and embarrassed me and my family since 1931."

WHAT is the truth? Well, in such matters truth lies at the bottom of a deep well and is hard to find. It is likely there had been provocation on both sides.

Editors can be extremely exasperating—especially to the kind of governors who find it necessary to employ bodyguards to follow them wherever they go.

AS to journalistic harassment, the newspapers of Louisiana harassed the Long machine for years and finally got a lot of its members behind the bars for steal loot.

The president of Louisiana's state university, a Long benchman, speculated in the stock market, lost, and used university funds to cover his losses. Officials of the Long machine were stealing materials from university buildings under construction and using them for their own private purposes. They were unmasked by a smart newspaper cameraman who snapped a picture showing them using university trucks to haul the stolen material to their own projects.

The newspapers can be maddeningly harassing to certain types of politicians.

(THIS Jackson editor, incidentally was deeply chagrined by being scooped on his own story. His paper, published in the evening, had just gone to press when the scrap started and his morning competitor got the break.)

County Health

A. N. JOHNSON, M. D. (Director Douglas County Health Department)

A tuberculin test is one of medicine's most valuable tests. It is easy to do and leads to a correct diagnosis. Since "tuberculosis comes from tuberculosis" it is of vital importance that "every effort should be made to find where each case has come from." Indeed, every member of the household should be examined where a child is found to have a positive reaction to the tuberculin test.

Some progress has been made in Douglas county to discover cases of tuberculosis. Since January 1, 1940, 1711 tuberculin tests have been given by the health department. Of this group 133 persons had positive reactions to the tuberculin test. A total of 168 x-rays have been taken of persons having positive tuberculin tests. It is important to remember that only a small percentage of those who have a positive tuberculin test really have active tuberculosis. A positive reaction means only that the tuberculosis germs have entered the body; an x-ray is necessary to determine whether any damage has been done or whether the body has successfully overcome the attack. A positive reaction merely points out that further investigation is advisable. By these procedures of tuberculin testing and x-ray it has been possible to find individuals who have active tuberculosis. Those persons are grateful that it has been made possible for them to know of their condition so that they may take every precaution for preventing further development of the disease.

Such results are largely due to the inspirational and educational work of the Douglas County Public Health association, the health-minded officials, physicians and citizens eager for health and education. The association sponsors an educational campaign, the purpose of which is to disseminate knowledge concerning tuberculosis, particularly in regard to the importance of early diagnosis as a means of prevention. Friday night, May 16, Dr. G. C. Bellinger, superintendent of the Oregon State Tuberculosis hospital, will address a meeting sponsored by the health association in cooperation with the public health association. The meeting will be held in the high school at Riddle at 8 o'clock. The public is invited. It is urged that as many as can attend this meeting as it is a real opportunity to hear Dr. Bellinger. He is considered one of the leading authorities on the subject of tuberculosis.

ECONOMY SCHEME

SALEM, Ore. (AP)—Mail between Oregon penitentiary inmates and the governor's office has diminished from about 15 letters a day to one or two a week.

Cecil Edwards, executive department secretary, explains it this way:

The state decided to furnish stationery with a printed form on the back. Every time a convict writes to the governor or the parole board he must list his complete criminal record.

In Malaysia bees make honey, but do not eat it. Since there is no winter there, the bees need not store up food.

Rainiers, Seals Advance in Race

By The Associated Press

It looks as if the Seattle Rainiers, last year's Pacific Coast league champions, have found the road back. Because of the few games separating the teams in the upper division, the Rainiers may win over Los Angeles, but might be overtaken by the Athletics, which will start in the grange hall at 8 o'clock.

Nothing Doing

MEMPHIS, Tenn.—The census enumerator asked one 99-year-old man here if he was employed.

"Nope, haven't worked in 39 years—nothing doing in my line," was the reply.

"What is your line?" asked the indefatigable questioner.

"Back driving," the oldster said.

Dodgers Battered For 18-to-2 Defeat

By JERSON BAILEY

Associated Press Sports Writer

One thing you can say about the Brooklyn Dodgers—when they fall they fall hard. Their first drop, after winning nine consecutive games, was 9-1 at Cincinnati and their second was 18-2 in St. Louis yesterday. The Cardinal power-houses cut 20 hits, seven home runs, 49 total bases. The performance set the National league record for homers in one game and bettered the modern league mark for total bases.

Joe Di Maggio No Help

It was a rough day for all the New York teams. Joe Di Maggio returned to the Yankees lineup and didn't do them a bit of good—getting one single in five times at bat. Once he fouled out with the bases loaded.

The upshot was that the Detroit Tigers topped the champs 12 for their fourth straight defeat and dropped the once haughty club into a tie for last place in the American league.

The Cincinnati Reds turned in a 7-6 victory over the New York Giants. Danning hit two homers, one of them with two on in the eighth to send New York ahead briefly, but then he dropped the ball when the Reds started a double steal.

The Pearson pitched the Phillies to a 1-0 decision over the Chicago Cubs in one of the best hurling shows of the season.

Pirates in Cellar

The Pittsburgh Pirates were knocked into the cellar of their seventh straight defeat, 11-9, by the Boston Red Sox.

The Boston Red Sox took the deciding game of their series with Cleveland 6-4 to slant the Indians into third place in the American league, a notch below Detroit.

The Chicago White Sox turned back the Philadelphia Athletics 6-3.

A wild pitch by Whitehead with the bases loaded and the score tied gave the Washington Senators their winning run in the tenth inning for a 6-5 verdict over the St. Louis Browns.

DAILY DEVOTIONS

DR. CHAS. A. EDWARDS

When the Roman officer compelled the Jewish subject to go a mile, that was the limit of duty. But if the Jewish subject chose to go another mile, that was the beginning of privilege and voluntary service. Andrew Carnegie once said to a graduating class of an eastern university: "Do your duty and a little bit more, and you will always have success." It is the little bit more that counts in life. It is only when we seek to achieve a little more to perform our task a little better and to live a little more noble than the average, that we really become Christian adventurers. One day a man inquired of Socrates the way to Mt. Olympus. The reply was, "You get to Mt. Olympus by going in that direction." When we face a more excellent goal than others, and make every sacrifice for its attainment, then we shall be living in the spirit of Jesus when He said, "Whoever shall compel them to go with him a mile, go with him two." Nothing can give greater joy than service well rendered. It is to those the Master will say "Well done." May we join that company of victors. Amen.

Rare Disease Hits Animals, Humans

SALEM, Ore. (AP)—A canine disease which also attacks humans, with a mortality rate of from 10 to 25 per cent, has been discovered in foxes in the Willamette valley, the department of agriculture has reported.

The disease, known as canine leptospirosis, is known as wollar disease when it attacks humans, and is prevalent in Holland and some other European countries.

Victims of the disease, both animal and human, show pronounced jaundice-like symptoms.

Since the disease has been discovered in Florida-bred racing dogs, all dogs entered from out of the state in the Portland races this year will probably be given blood tests to determine if they are tainted, department heads said.

First trace of the disease in Oregon was discovered by Dr. C. E. Long, veterinarian of Independence.

The disease has been found in California, and has resulted in several human deaths there, the department said. Sewer workers and fishermen have been known to contract the disease although they have not been exposed to contact with dogs.

CHAPTER VII

"To the lifeboats!"

A steward was calling into the darkness. His voice boomed to make itself heard above the cries and confusion in the passageway.

In the blackness of her cabin, Mary's hands searched for the all-important lifebelt. "And one for Anna, too," she remembered as she groped beneath the bunk for the biotated canvas jackets. "And now for some clothes."

But the blackness was unyielding. What she thought was the door to her closet turned out to be the door to the passageway. "Never mind, this will do." On the way out, her hands caught up the simple wrap-around of Anna's gray uniform. Open from neck to hem it was easy to don, even in the dark.

Then, with whatever there is about a woman that makes a handbag an essential, Mary automatically caught up a purse.

The passageway swarmed with night figures. Here and there a hand flashlight sent beady rays into the dark. Jostling passengers pushed and elbowed their way up the companionway flights to the life-saving stations of the boat deck. A feeble flicker of green from an emergency battery set showed a fair-haired child riding high above the others, perhaps on the shoulders of his father. And in the grim, sickly light that turned living people into green corpses, the awaiting passengers seemed like strange, troglodytic from a place even more horrible than a world at war.

In the darkness again, away from the green light, Mary could hear the sober voices of the imperforable crew calling directions, offering assistance, and best of all, encouragement.

"Only one more flight," she heard the crisp voice of a stewardess. "There's a place for everyone in the lifeboats."

Their orderliness was in strange contrast to all else—to the cries of distress, to the plaints and lamentations and voiced indignation. But she cry above all others, would sound in her ears until the day of her death, Mary knew. "My baby, oh my baby!" she heard, and shuddered. "I must find my baby."

"I must find Anna Winters," she was reminded anew. "She'll be frightened and alone. I have her lifebelt!"

On the boat deck, the confusion of the stairway was a prelude to the terrifying chaos of the fevered scene. Sailors, stripped to the waist, steered in the lex wind as they obeyed uncomprehending directions from the captain, relayed through their officers.

"Life saving station 41, launch your boat!"

"Fourth watch, count your passengers!"

And through it all the creak and groan of winches protested as lifeboats swung from their davits and, suspended for a time in midair, would drop unexpectedly fast as the Moravia sank deeper and deeper into the water.

Above, the moon rode high in calm glory, flooding the dancing waters with bright, cold light.

"What was it? What happened?" A distraught passenger joined the group at Mary's lifeboat station.

"A torpedo hit us. I saw it." A stout American was positive. "I came up on deck after dinner for a turn around. When I got beyond the glassing part I started looking at the moon. It was a sub. I could see the periscope. I was right by the rail. I almost pitched into the sea."

"I saw it, too," another passenger broke in. "I even knew it was going to hit. And it did."

Mary in her panic was only remotely conscious of what was taking place around her. But one brief drama held her fascinated gaze.

In the face of a torch she saw a familiar figure. His light hair and foreign hair cut wore too individual ever to be mistaken. They could belong to one person only—to the blond youth who had returned her heart only a short half hour before. She saw him approach the rail and the single shaft of light fell full on his countenance. One could not fail to read its pained surprise, its look of longing and above all, of recognition. The youth gained the rail and, with the quiet of a cat, dropped over the side.

It was difficult to believe this final horror in a chain of grim events. For what reason had this handsome foreign boy died, Mary wondered. It was certainly not because of heroism. The stewardess had said there was a place for everybody in the lifeboats. We were to die, she knew. But why?

There was no time for reflection. Just as her group was ordered to file into the boat, consternation came over the ship. All stood breathless as a black shaft rose up in the path of moonlight. The portico of an undersea boat was clear to be seen.

"Another torpedo!" But nobody spoke it aloud. It was a thought set horrible as only to be whispered.

It seemed like bare seconds be-

Serial Story

When the second torpedo hit home, The Moravia again convulsed with the seizure of awful pain as the explosion ripped a great gash into her leviathan side.

When the second torpedo hit, Mary Carroll was propelled forward down the deck, towards the lifeboat. Her face struck a bulkhead. The ship trembled in the water. Again Mary was thrown forward, toward the place where the prow was dangerously close to the water's edge. But she was halted abruptly. A beam struck her and the blindness of pain shut out all else.

Great arms encircled her. She found herself being lifted up. Then all she knew was the sickening, unsteady motion of a light craft in a choppy sea.

When she regained consciousness she found her lifeboat was already at some distance from the ship. The sea danced in the still brilliant moonlight. It had come alive, now with all manner of objects bobbing on its surface. In a fan, out from the sinking Moravia, red flares showed the lifeboats. Now and then, one of them would stop to drag a swimmer out of the water.

"You're injured, Miss," a voice said to Mary. A hand held a dripping cloth to her face.

"Thanks, oh, thanks," she started to reply. Then everything was blotted out in the ghastly scene as a fiery lash of pain struck her face. She felt a merciful curtain of oblivion drawn over her.

"This," she thought, "is the end." (To be continued)

Janmoore Hotel in Portland Meets Public Demand

Because after several months' study the management of the Danmoore hotel in Portland has found certain demands are made by the people who visit Portland and stop in hotels... many of these demands are now being met at the Danmoore... first reasonable rates, room without bath single rate $1.50, instead of a dollar for the second person in the room a charge of 50 cents is made... Room with bath $2.00 single, $2.50 double are the minimum rates... second the Danmoore hotel makes no charge for your car in their fireproof garage... the garage is free... third... cheerful bright rooms, many of which have soft Monterey or Carmel colored furniture... four family or group rates... a family of four, two adults and two children may have two connecting rooms with bath for as low rate as $4.00 per day... recently $10,000.00 was spent on improvements at the Danmoore and now the manager, Ray W. Clark, formerly in business in Roseburg, announced that the Danmoore has the BEST HOTEL ROOM VALUE in Portland and he suggests that you try the Danmoore on your next trip... he also says that if you are not pleased with the rate and appointments of the rooms at the Danmoore he will pay your taxi fare to another hotel... The Hotel Danmoore is at 12th and S. W. Morrison streets.
