gan, furious because the words were so blurred and indistinct. Mrs. Tully, obviously not understanding, let the mirror slip from her hands.

CHAPTER IX
Then, everything was forgotten as the door at the far end of the ward opened and a man came slowly down the aisle.

Mrs. Tully, refreshed by her nap, stirred in bed. Mrs. Tully was middle-aged, but there was vestige enough of what had once been real beauty to make people describe her as a handsome woman.

Sitting up in bed, she reached under her pillow and drew forth a large square mirror and from some hole extracted puff and powder.

Mary Carroll, her eyes leaping with wild joy at sight of the figure coming down the aisle, paid no attention.

Vincent was here—Vincent had not given her up for dead! Mary started to signal wildly to him. She tried to scream his name.

Mrs. Tully, leaning toward her, caught the excitement. "What's wrong? See anyone you know?"

Mary remained motionless until she heard Vincent's familiar steps, slow and dragged now, return from his search through the ward.

A nurse rushed quickly to her side. Soon, she felt the cool fingers of Dr. Lenox on her pulse. She heard Mrs. Tully say, "Honest, Dr. Lenox, I wouldn't have let her see the mirror for the world."

Dr. Lenox ignored the woman and spoke quietly to Mary. "I'm sorry, I'd hoped to prepare you at first, but that's because of what you've been through."

"My face!" Mary struggled to make herself heard. "Tell me the truth. Her hands clutched his. Dr. Lenox drew a chair to the bedside, his red hair subdued and russet in the shadows from the night light.

"This is going to be hard to take—but I think you can stand it. In time, I believe you are going to be all right. The injury to your face when the Moravia was torpedoed seemed superficial at first, but shock, coupled with the stinging blow when you were apparently pitched forward on the deck, has caused a facial paralysis.

"Miss Winters?" Mary repeated stupidly. "Miss Winters?"

She stopped, more terrified than ever. The doctor had not understood what she was trying to say, but she knew of a sudden, what had happened. Her hand touched the big, black pocketbook on the bed. Anna Winters' bag. She saw the tattered gray dress across the chair.

Instantly, everything became a clear, Anna Winters had dressed that night in Mary's red gown. She carried Mary's gold purse with its identifying contents. Anna had a serious heart condition. Shock of the torpedoing and the stampede that followed had perhaps permitted her to die quickly and peacefully.

That's how the ghastly mistake had been made. Mary Carroll was listed as dead—Anna Winters as a survivor.

Yes, she was supposed to be Anna Winters. In the shabby black handbag was Anna's passport and visa, and the letter—"To Whom It May Concern."

Had it not been for the terrible disfigurement, Mary Carroll would have cleared it all up at once. As it was, she was too mute, too stunned to know which way to turn.

She closed her eyes. Dear Anna, Anna who had been so fragile and so beautiful in the flame red dress.

Dr. Lenox went on, "As long as you're an English girl, you can stay right here in London."

Mary nodded. Yes, she would stay in London. Perhaps Vincent would be here and when she was well again she could go to him.

The doctor was standing up, signaling for a nurse. "I've pulled you through so far and I'm going to see you the rest of the way," he said. "Keep up your chin, Anna Winters, and don't say die. We'd like this yet."

The nurse brought medicine. Maccabee Hall Public Dance Saturday Night Music by Rhythmeers Everybody Welcome Admission 25c

Bob Feller Blanks Yanks With 3 Hits

By JUDSON BAILEY

(Associated Press Sports Writer) Bob Feller is just the kind of a fellow who's liable to keep rapping at that no-hit door long enough for it to open again.

He barely was mistracked yesterday as he shut out the New York Yankees for Cleveland, 4-0, on three hits. He didn't give up a safety until the seventh inning, when with one out Joe Di Maggio finally banged a single. After that the tension was off and the 21-year-old speedster let out a single in the eighth and another in the ninth.

Walter turned in a five-hit job on the Boston Bees in the course of a 4-1 victory for the Cincinnati Reds. It was his fifth triumph without a setback.

Larry French Loses. Tex Carleton locked in a dramatic duel with Larry French that went ten innings before the Brooklyn Dodgers broke through for a 4-1 victory over the Chicago Cubs.

The horrible bottom in pitching was reached at Pittsburgh as the Pirates lost their ninth consecutive game by a 17-6 score to the New York Giants. Frenzied Frankie Frisch used five fingers who gave up 15 hits, ten bases on balls and hit three batters.

A St. Louis rookie, Ernie White, came through with a good relief chore as the Cardinals overpowered the Phillies 8-4.

The Detroit Tigers came from behind to tie their game with the Boston Red Sox at five-all in the seventh and then Hash shut them out until the tenth, when Peacock of the Sox singled with the bases loaded for a 6-5 verdict.

Dutch Leonard triumphed over the hapless Chicago White Sox 8-1. Bob Harris scattered seven hits and the Browns beat the Philadelphia Athletics 4-2.

Oregon State Makes It Two in Row Over Huskies

(By the Associated Press) The Oregon State Beavers made disaster complete for the Washington Huskies yesterday when they scored a 7-5 victory in Corvallis to sweep their two-game northern division, Pacific Coast conference baseball series. It was the Huskies' fourth straight defeat on their Oregon invasion.

The victory widened the gap between the league leading Beavers and the second place Oregon Webfoots by two full games.

The Webfoots have a chance to cut down this lead when they meet the Idaho Vandals in a two-game series opening in Moscow today.

The score: Washington 5 10 1 Oregon State 7 10 1 Heath and Watson; Shaw and Lovvich.

Angelenos Trim Seattle; Padres Defeat Portland

(By the Associated Press) The Los Angeles Angels overcame a Rainier lead with a four-run drive in the eighth inning to defeat Seattle 7-3 in the south last night and even their Pacific coast league series at one-all.

The league leading San Diego Padres continued their strange hold on first place by winning their third straight from Portland 7-1.

Trailing by one run going into the ninth inning Hollywood staged "Drink this and you'll feel better," she ordered briskly. Her crisp skirts rustled indignantly as she turned to Mrs. Tully, who had been the witness cause of the bedside drama.

Mary picked up Anna's handbag again and took out the letter. If she was supposed to be Anna Winters she must know at once what it said.

With prize money for only seven teams in the seven-team five-man event, the Roseburg team placed just outside the prize ranks with a team total of 2680.
