Major Hoopie New Yeast Tracer for Ages of Bread-Making

From Maca yeast, a new, fast, granular yeast which enables the baker to produce a shapely, dotti, evenly browned, light and tender loaf in a few hours, breadmaking can be traced back through the centuries to the primitive axes when the earliest bread was formed on meal and water maked on hot stones.

Tradition says that in Egypt a quantity of meal and water, intended for baking, was overlooked by a servant. When this was baked next day, the bread was found to be lighter, more spongy, and better in flavor than usual. From that time on, for centuries, it was customary to save a portion of dough from each baking to serve as leaven for the next.

From the primitive liquid yeast, usually home-made, to commercial yeast, whether compressed and fast acting, or dry and slow acting, was a big step in better bread making. Now, for the first time, a new yeast combines the best qualities of the two former types of commercial yeasts: it has the fast action of moist, or compressed yeast; it has the extra resistance to spoilage found only in the scientifically dried yeast, and may be kept on the pantry shelf between loaves.

Oregon's Own and Only Sugar Salutes BAKER . . . and Her Silvery Lakes and Treasures of "Gold"

There's gold in Baker's hills . . . and gold in the yellow grain of her fields, and in the big timbers of her Ponderosa pine forests and in her livestock herds and her poultry flocks and her big game reserves and her "silvery" mountain lakes. For example, Anthony Lakes, only thirty-five miles away, bid fair to become a winter and summer resort where skiing is unsurpassed on any "skaway" in America. A $140,000 ski project, including ski trails and a new lodge, is now under construction.

From Oregon's first gold "strike" in 1861, Baker county has been Oregon's leading producer of precious metals. But Baker county's "pay dirt" is not limited to precious metals, for over 15,000 tons of limestone from Lime, Oregon, is used in the refining processes of Oregon's own "White Satin" Sugar every year. Also, it produces nearly $600,000 a year in freight revenue . . . a most important factor to Huntington, Baker, we salute you!

Guaranteed for Canning

FACTS ABOUT BAKER COUNTY
$150,000,000 in precious metals have been taken from Baker County since 1861. Farm crops bring $4,000,000 and lumber payrolls amount to $2,000,000 annually. One million acres of grazing land furnishes pasture for 120,000 beef cattle and sheep. Unlimited scenic-recreational pleasures make it a year-round vacation land.
