Every state, county and city official or board that handles public money should publish at regular intervals an accounting of it, showing where and how each dollar is spent. This is a fundamental principle of democratic government.

AS THE new European war enters its decisive last phase, there are still some who look back to a resumption of free, private trade, just as it was before the invasion of Poland.

It is more than possible that this food, sentimental backward gaze was one of the factors in the undoing of France. The conquered republic was constantly looking back to her triumph in the world war, and to the system of trade, political, and military alliances it had made then. They were gone, but France looked back.

The United States is fortunate in that it can look ahead, if it will, untroubled into this strange new world. But unfortunately nostalgia and the compelling remembrance of things past are also strong among us.

The trade war in South America forecast for "after the war" has not even waited for that war's end. Already Germany is seeking orders for steel and machine plants there, so confident of victory in the war that she is reported posting cash bonds to guarantee delivery in September and October.

Should Germany emerge from the war as economic spokesman for 100,000,000 people in Europe, Japan control the economic activities of another 100,000,000 in Asia, and Russia another 200,000,000, foreign trade is going to be something the like of which the world never saw.

Gigantic pressures will be able to be directed in turn and at will on one small independent country after another. Their only chance to avoid complete economic dependence will be to combine.

That makes the Hull reciprocal trade program, designed for a free world, a dead issue today. New techniques must be devised to meet new situations. They are in the making.

The world has embarked on a strange, wild course, and during the lifetime of most people now living, there is no returning.

Is war a means to an end or an end in itself?

Strangely as it falls on America's ears, there are some who believe that it is an end in itself, that man is destined for war as the sparks fly upward, and that in war he finds the highest and best expression of his own existence. We tend to look on war as a crime way to attain an end when all other means have failed.

When the war in Europe is over, and the countries which took the sword have achieved the unattained ends for which they strove, will the sword then be sheathed? Or will it still be brandished in the world's face as a reminder that some still consider it a good in itself?

The whole future course of the United States depends on which outcome we see. If the decision is to cling to war for itself, then our part of the world is safe except under the protection of its own superior weapons.

Farmers find it hard to forget the world war and $2 wheat.

At the beginning of the present struggle in Europe warlords were sounded by the clear-sighted that the present course would be different. Each warring country had vast food stocks laid by. Rationing began at once. Civilian consumption dropped. Export to country after country has been completely cut off. There is no reason to expect improvement in these restrictions on exports until the war is over.

Whether an exhausted Europe will then be facing starvation, and call in anguish for American food, as has been predicted, we do not know. But we do know that this war has brought no boom to American farmers and will not.

IS A WOLF. Aid to hard-pressed Britain will have no place in his calculations. He will snap at Britain's throat as quickly as at Germany's haum. He will be looking out strictly for Number One.

But the fact can't be escaped that if he SHOULD decide to move it would harm Britain more than it would harm her.

FIRES break out in Washington's forests. "Only a good rain can save us from a major catastrophe" the chief warden of the Washington Forest Fire association says.

The Pacific coast's mild winter was pleasant while it lasted, but we're beginning to pay for lack of snow in increased forest fire hazard.

JOHN APPLETON, assistant director of the Northwest Regional council, speaking in Portland, says:

"65.2 per cent of the residents of the Pacific Northwest receive their incomes directly from the forests."

Forest fires, you see, are EVERYBODY'S BUSINESS here in the Pacific Northwest.

State Press Comment

Legislators' Pay Again (Portland Oregonian)
The return of an old issue will be noted in the list of measures in the November ballot. It proposes to raise the pay of members of the legislature to $4 a day for fifty days. The pay is now $3 a day for forty days. The voters have on several occasions rejected pay increases for legislators, submitted as separate propositions. Pay increases have been included in still other rejected proposals for changing the general composition of the lawmaking body.

While there is never any difficulty in finding citizens willing to do the lawmaking work at $4 a day, still the sum is perilous toward for the services expected of them. The state, which should pay top value received, does not do so.

It is not overlooked that the employment payroll of the session is out of all reason. Nonetheless every member has a secretary at $5 a day. Legislators of some other states are in advance of Oregon's in establishing compact clerical organizations.
