THE nomination of Henry Wallace, forced by the president himself, completes the new deal third term ticket.

The lineup is the best possible for the ultimate good of the country. There is no conservative charmer on the new deal slate...

Now the issue of the forthcoming presidential campaign is clear cut—there is only one issue—that of new deal versus anti-new deal.

If the people are satisfied with the administration of the last eight years, if they are willing to see another four year term of identical leadership, they will vote for the new deal ticket.

Actually we are at the crossroads. There has not been such an important campaign in more than a generation—if ever before.

There will be ample opportunity during the next few months for voters to learn about the merits and faults of the candidates.

OUT OUR WAY

HIGH TIDE By Frances Hanna

YESTERDAY, Derek reflects on his unhappy boyhood with his rich divorced parents. Heir to a huge fortune, he is amused at Jan getting him a job. Later he criticizes Jan's paintings. Jan weeps and he kisses her.

Chapter II Blunderer

Jan pushed her hair back. Her mouth was stubborn, her eyes determined. "I will not tell him to go," she said to Lance. "He's going to stay here as long as I wish to, or he wishes to. This is my affair and you keep out of it. If you don't, I'll never forgive you. I won't listen to you, Lance. I won't take orders from you."

He realized abruptly that her apparent eagerness of temper, her soothing tranquillity, were products of self-discipline, artificial restraints built up in consideration of him these last two years. He had been too self-centered to stop and wonder at her sudden meekness. He was sick, crippled; he was her brother, she loved him. It was only right she should care for him, so he had thought, subconsciously. Perhaps, sublimating herself to his needs, she had turned to painting for release. It was her outlet, her safety valve. Knowing they could not afford a nurse or companion for him, knowing she could not leave him alone, she had taken to painting. And now romance in the form of a castaway stranger had come seeking her out. Of course she might fancy herself in love with him. Why wouldn't she? Still, Jan was practical and level-headed. It wouldn't amount to anything. He should have employed more diplomacy, demonstrated a greater perspicacity.

"I'll apologize to her," he decided. "I can't have her hiding her life from me." And now he went on to remember other things. Of how, at twenty-eight, he'd been a fine aviator, a trusted pilot, of how his exuberant young spirits went on leap the moment he stepped into a cockpit and were released only when he stepped out; of the good money he earned. He paid for Jan's schooling and living and his life was his own so long as his parachute opened.

There were girls, lots of girls, always. He had the sort of look women fancied. Sometimes, for a while, there would be one girl in particular. But they were not all alike if they cared for him; they wanted him to stop flying. Well, he'd stopped flying. Barber, flying had stopped him. And now the only girl he saw was

Jan? I'll look like a Mexican vaquero by tomorrow night." "And what does a Mexican vaquero look like?" Norma asked. "Like an Indian trimmed in silver." Observing his listeners' interest he expanded under the influence of a well-filled stomach and a steaming cup of coffee. "The vaquero is picturesque, but not really so much so as the street sweepers who all day huddled against buildings, benches or trees with a blanket over their shoulders, knees drawn up, and a frayed sombrero over their faces. You see the same ones in the same places every day. If one of 'em died it wouldn't be discovered for days! It's different, though, down around Acapulco. Most of the natives, men and women and children, work very hard, keep immaculately clean and save their pesos."

DAILY DEVOTIONS DR. CHAS. A. EDWARDS

Christianity is a religion of scars. Trouble in this world is inevitable. "They have persecuted me, they will persecute you also," said the Master. The sufferings of this present time demand that we examine afresh the marks of discipleship. We often hear people sing, "Will there be any stars in my crown?" But a question of more vital importance is this: Will there be any scars in my body? St. Paul says, "I bear in my body the marks of the Lord Jesus." He puts aside all matters of minor interest; he is a man with the scars. Here is a language understood by suffering humanity. What has our loyalty to Jesus cost us in personal sacrifice, suffering, or loss? Conviction and moral courage have left scars on many a noble soul. Jesus speaks to the world in the language of wounds, and these wounds speak for us before the Father. His life was given for us, to redeem us from sin. What have we given in return? "I gave my life for thee, my precious blood I shed, that thou might ransom be, and quickened from the dead. I gave my life for thee, what hast thou given for me." Lord, search our hearts and make us truly thine. Amen.

Willie Graffied At Demos' Choice

WASHINGTON, July 18.—(AP)—Senator McNary of Oregon, the republican vice-presidential nominee, told reporters today that it was "perfectly logical" Mr. Roosevelt was re-nominated for a third term. "There was no surprise to it because the nomination came according to program and work that has been going on for a number of years," McNary said.

Arnold E. Hash Funeral Occurs at Canyonville

CANYONVILLE, July 19.—Funeral services were held here Wednesday for Arnold E. Hash, 29, who died near Grants, Pa., early this week when he was overcome by gas fumes and drowned in a water-filled mine shaft. Arnold Hash was born at Portland, Ore., April 15, 1920, and lived the major part of his life in Canyonville, where he was a member of the graduating class of 1938 at Canyonville high school. Surviving are his parents, Mr. and Mrs. H. J. Hash, and a sister, Rosetta Mae. Funeral services were conducted by the Rev. J. M. Davis at the Methodist church, of which Mr. Hash was a member. Concluding services followed at the Masonic cemetery.
