Police Are Withdrawn In Kidnaping Case

Taken From Go-Cart
Little Mike, the son of Constable and Countess Marie de Tristram and step-grandson of Louis Shuttick Coon, president of the vast Phelps Dodge Corp., was out for an air trip in his go-cart, accompanied by his nurse, when the kidnaper drove up in a car and roughly carried him away. The man threatened the nurse with a pistol.

Cates, who with his wife came here for the recent marriage of the countess' brother, Charles Christenson, was taking an active part in arranging to comply with the kidnaper's wishes. He told newspapermen:

"We have requested all law enforcement agencies to withhold any action in this case until we have complied with any and all requests of the man who has our child. "We wish to comply with any and all demands of the man and will do so."

"So far, all law enforcement officials have agreed to comply with our requests, and we are ready to meet all demands of the man."

With authorities cooperating the family was left alone only a trifling policeman remaining in the street out front to keep curious motorists moving. Newsmen collaborated fully, withdrawing from the scene.

Nurse Knocked Down.

The unbridled nurse, Mary Foley, was knocked to the ground and painfully bruised when she tried to save the boy.

The chubby, curly-haired lad was speeded away in a station wagon just as the kidnaper fled. Persons in the neighborhood managed to catch a glimpse of part of the license number.

The kidnaper was described by Miss Foley as a husky, dark-skinned man with a prominent nose, about 48 or 50 years old. She and the boy were nearly half a mile from the de Tristram home when the man accented here and asked "is this the de Tristram child?"

Taken aback by the question, she said "why, yes?"

The man said not another word, but pulled a pistol, grabbed the child and started for the car he had waiting at the curb.

Police Chief Claude Hirshey of Hillsboro made contents of the weekly ransom note public immediately after it was turned over to him.

"I believed it possible at that time that officers might apprehend a man without a hat and with a 2-year-old child in the car as described, and because I felt the kidnaper would not retain the child for any length of time, but would kill him and retain some of his clothes for identification so ransom still could be collected," Chief Hirshey explained.

The note was in an envelope which bore an unrecalled stamp, but no address. It was dropped at the curb where Nurse Foley scuffled with the kidnaper. It was picked up by Florio Williams, a grocer-messman living in the neighborhood. She turned it over to an Hirshey, unaware that it implied harm to the child if police were told.

Home Guard Plan Rapped by Solon

WASHINGTON, Sept. 21.—(AP)—Senator Johnson (D., Cal.) asserted today that a plan approved by the war department to set up state "home guard" units might permit governors to use such organizations as "political footballs."

The proposed units would be organized in states from which the national guard has been called to active federal duty.

Johnson voiced his objections to reporters after he was said to have protested to the senate military committee that a bill authorizing the home guard units gave almost unlimited authority to governors to establish armed groups which might be used for almost any purpose.

"Some governors might use these units for political footballs or for vigilante groups," he told reporters.

The military committee subsequently reconsidered its previous action approving the measure.

Chairman Sheppard (D., Tex.) said that John L. Lewis, CIO leader, had protested to the committee against what Lewis called "independent state armies."

Lewis, Sheppard said, urged that additional units be set up within the framework of the national guard and that their use be subject to present guard regulations.

As approved by the war department and the house military committee, the legislation before the committee would permit the secretary of war to furnish arms and equipment for the home guards but control of the troops would rest solely with the states.

Two of the visiting nurses, Elsie Franklin of Portland and Clara Wolfe of The Dalles, won the plaudits of the convention today as the result of a fishing excursion Friday. On their return from a fishing trip to the North Emporta river, five miles from Roseburg late yesterday afternoon, the two nurses returned with a large catch of trout, and proudly exhibited a 20-inch cutthroat, weighing three and one-half pounds. McNary Says Farmers Not Yet Helped

He provided, and I assert, in full confidence, that the next administration will be able to provide something better.

The next administration will not begin, as did the new deal, with the notion that American economy is winding up, that it is in its dotage. The republican party and the next administration take direct issue with the concept of a shrinking economy. We propose to create greater abundance, not to arrive for security and devote our chief energy to planning how to distribute that security. I have said that the farm problem is primarily one of markets. The new deal, while it has made little effort to "feed them."

Hits Trade Treaties
Republican trade treaties, the candidate declared, are not reduction, do not promote trade and are not properly treaties. He said the next administration undoubtedly will deal with foreign countries "collectively" and "at the least, it will reserve to the American farmer producer first access to his own market."

"The next administration," McNary continued, "will further, by every means, seek to enlarge the American market for farm products, both by improving the conditions of our own economy and also by encouraging the induc-

Elkton School District To Erect New Building

ELKTON, Sept. 21.—Construction of a new grade school building by the Elkton district is expected to start soon as the result of action taken by patrons at a recent election when approval was given by a vote of 42 to 33 for issuance of bonds in the sum of $27,500. The bonds will be used to finance the cost of a four-room building, with gymnasium and kitchen. The thoroughly modern structure will be located on the Oliver Haines property, Graham B. Smith, Eugene architect, has been employed to draw plans for the building which will accommodate 120 students. The present valuation of the district is $972,375 and there are no outstanding warrants or bonds.

McNary described as "wise and well considered legislation" the inclusion of the marketing agreement provision in the agricultural adjustment act. "This provision may be termed appropriately one of the corner stones of this act," he remarked.

The speaker said he feared that former secretary of Agriculture Wallace, his democratic opponent for the vice presidency, "seeks a change of venue" and has "elected to transfer his campaign from the farm belt to Eugene."

McNary said Wallace's "attempt to make party the test of patronage is sheer mischievousness," and if taken seriously, it might injure the national unity so needed in a crisis.
