PONY PAUL REVERE

Because his tiny village in Berkshire, England, does not have an air raid siren, this 14-year-old lad, astride his trusty Shetland steed, dashes about giving the alarm on a cornet to warn villagers when enemy planes are sighted.

RAF Stages Terrific Raid on German Bases

British general headquarters in Cairo reported a "concentration" of British troops around Tobruk and said operations were continuing farther west on the Libyan desert.

Hitler's high command acknowledged that RAF bombers raided "various places" in western Germany, inflicting a toll of 20 killed and many wounded.

Factories, blast furnaces, railway and oil plants were heavily bombed in the Ruhr, the air ministry declared.

After a 3-day lull, naz warplanes violently renewed their night attacks on Britain, the German high command said, blasting particularly hard at Manchester, Liverpool and London.

Aid-To-Britain Program Introduced in Congress

ough to permit the use of any of our military, naval, or air bases to outfit and repair the weapons of countries whose defense is vital to the defense of the United States."

Ten Billion Cost Seen. The measure authorizes the appropriation of funds "in such amounts as may be necessary" to carry out its provisions.

As to the section permitting the communication of "defense" that it gave the president discretionary authority "to make available designs, blueprints and other information for using particular equipment."

No Double Standard. The government, Barkley explained, would order for foreign governments "only those materials which our army and navy could use."

"This means that we shall be producing the same material for our friends as for ourselves," he said.

"It should eliminate double assembly lines in our factories, and should help to standardize our war materials among the democracies."

Barkley said the measure contained no waiver of the wage-hour law, the Walsh-Healey public contracts act or the Wagner labor relations act.

Mr. Roosevelt, besides discussing the aid-to-Britain legislation, announced that he had signed a proclamation requiring copper, brass, bronze, zinc, nickel and potash to be exported only under export licenses, effective Feb. 3.

The president told reporters that he did not necessarily want the powers apparently contained in the British aid bill, but that somebody must have it in order to take quick action.

He replied in the negative when asked whether the legislation would have the effect of repealing the neutrality act ban against loans to belligerents and the Johnson act prohibition against credits to world war debt defaulters.

The president told his press conference, however, that the language employed in the bill—that equipment loans could be made "notwithstanding" a any prior acts—was the usual phrase in legislation and was required to avoid conflict of laws.

If there is any conflict, the president said, the later law supersedes the prior law.

In reply to a question from Senator Vandenberg (R., Mich.), Barkley said it was planned to have the house and senate foreign affairs committees consider the legislation simultaneously in order to speed action.

Internal Collapse Will Whip Axis, Dr. Morris Says

ness, except for the small group engaged in munitions and arms manufacture, finds greatest profit and development.

The totalitarian system, he declared, stands for the destruction of these principles.

"Despite their repeated denials," he asserted, "it is significant that it has been those countries which have been most active in promotion of personal freedom and free enterprise that have been attacked and overrun by the aggressors."

Axis Seeks Quick Win. The next three or four months, he predicted, will see a "vicious and brutal attempt" by the axis powers to win the war quickly. Time, he said, is in favor of Britain, and the aggressors will launch their "all-out" effort as soon as possible in a desperate effort to win quickly.

"Undoubtedly the United States can live into itself alone—but it would be a far different life," he declared in picturing the result of a possible totalitarian victory.

Out of a total of one billion, eight hundred million people, only two hundred million would not be under the domination of the totalitarian powers, the speaker said.

"If you contemplate the economics of that situation you can see it is very serious indeed," Dean Morris declared.

"The first thing to come would be government control so rigid you could do nothing except under federal order. Thus you would have the same regimentation as under the totalitarian control. From an economic point of view we have much at stake in this present war and should be deeply concerned by the situation."

Latin America Touched on. Dr. Morris spoke briefly of South American trade, pointing out that South American products fit better into European than North American needs and that, in fact, the two Americas are in effect in trade competition. He stressed the importance of the Panama canal, not only from a defense standpoint, but in preserving economic balance through its effect upon transportation costs, and declared that it is essential that South America be kept out of totalitarian control.

He concluded with the thought that the great bulk of business depends for progress and profit upon a peaceful world; that business is based upon contracts, property rights, credits and good word.

"Take these away," he said, "and business as we know it today would disappear. We still would have economic life, but not life as we know it today. It is useless to talk about neutrality. The United States must either be a great reservoir of materials for Britain, or it must participate actively both with materials and men."

Directors Chosen. The banquet program, in addition to the entertainment and short talks by visitors, included a brief report by W. C. Harding, chamber of commerce secretary, on activities of the past year. Mr. Harding predicted much industrial development, highway improvement and other activity for the ensuing year.

A counting of the ballots east for new directors resulted in the election of William Adair, Harris Ellsworth, V. V. Harpham, Fred Lockwood, H. O. Pargeter and George Smith. Holdover directors are Louis Fullerton, Jack Hart, Louis Josse, G. M. Krell, L. A. Rhoden and H. C. Wells. The directors are expected to meet next Monday to elect a president and other officers for the coming year.

Sentence of 10 Years Is Meted to Morals Culprit

Pleading guilty to a charge of statutory rape, John Stoops, 52, a bachelor, was sentenced in circuit court here late yesterday to 10 years in the state penitentiary. The court's sentence was imposed only four hours after his arrest at Myrtle Creek.

Two years ago Stoops came into Douglas county from Washington, hiking along the highway, hauling his few belongings in a pushcart. He pitched a tent on the city dump at Myrtle Creek and has subsisted by salvage from it and gold panned from the gravel banks of the South Umpqua river.

Information that minor girls had been seen at his tent home led to an investigation which resulted in the arrest, Sheriff Cliff Thornton said.

London dispatches described the nazi luftwaffe's overnight raids as among the biggest and most widespread in recent weeks, with Liverpool raided at frequent intervals over a period of several hours and German bombers fanning out over the island kingdom from Wales to northeast England.

A British communique, however, declared casualties were "nowhere large."

In southern England, a giant explosion in the sky during a barrage by anti-aircraft guns shook houses 10 miles away—apparently a bomb-loaded raider blown to pieces by a direct hit.

In London, two persons were killed when an anti-aircraft shell fell to the earth before exploding.

In London military circles discussed as a possibility a British offensive against Italy herself once the north African campaign could be cleaned up. Such a campaign, they said, would be aimed at check-mating a nazi invasion of England.
