COMIC OPERETTA TO BE PRESENTED IN ROSEBURG AS SWIMMING POOL BENEFIT

When the people of Roseburg attend the comic opera, "Trial by Jury," which is to be produced here in the spring by a local cast, they will be witnessing one of the most popular of the works by Gilbert and Sullivan. The partnership of these two men is an outstanding example of genius. As a dramatist, Gilbert was clever, and as a composer, Sullivan created beauty; but together they supplemented and complimented each other's abilities to such an extent that their collaborative efforts in humor and music have no equal.

Contrary to the works of some writers who achieved immediate success only to "wear out" soon, the operas of these men have endured in popularity. The sun never sets on a Gilbert and Sullivan show, for they are produced all over the world. After performances were first given by the Savoy opera in England and everybody from factory workers and hack drivers to parliamentary speakers, were humming their tunes, there was no stopping their spread. As international copyright laws were not yet adequate to prohibit unscrupulous use or piracy of productions, soon eight theatres in New York alone were giving Gilbert and Sullivan shows before uproarious houses, much to the irritation of the English manager who had hoped to keep these productions within his own control.

One reason for the great popularity of Gilbert and Sullivan is that they never underrated their public's intelligence. They discovered "what the public wanted" long before those words had been turned into catch phrases by small wits who conceive that the public want only innuendo.

Another important feature of the works is their rhythmical elegance. Both words and music have rhythm, not of a vulgar unrestrained type, but of refinement and taste along with their humor and animation. Response to rhythm is an instructive impulse and no one can resist the contagious rhythms of the Gilbert and Sullivan shows.

In these days of restlessness and anxiety, the public is thankful for a pair of artists like Gilbert and Sullivan, whose plays take one of their matter-of-fact environment into a fantastic land of mirth and melody.

The opera is under the direction of Miss Helene Robinson and includes Roseburg singers donating their time and talents for this production to raise money for the swimming pool fund. The Roseburg Kiwanis club, together with
