TER warplanes. The answer to the bomber that flies at night hasn't yet been found.

HERE'S one for the books:

Badminton, one of our fast-spreading sports, is threatened by the war. Up to now the tail feathers for the silly-looking ball it is played with have been made from the wing feathers of Balkan geese.

ABSURD? Of course. But it goes to show how war DISRUPTS EVERYTHING.

So does smallpox, for that matter. But we've made progress toward CONTROLLING smallpox.

Martha remembered the concoction he called "stungullum" he had insisted on making that night they played two-handed bridge. Her face burned.

"Mr. Elliott will not be calling any more." The words seemed very loud in the suddenly still room.

The cleaning woman eyed her shrewdly. Those little blue eyes, in their bed of wrinkles, were like the eyes of a bright, inquisitive bird. "Oh, so Mr. Elliott won't be calling, eh? How disappoointed that Miss Trent upstairs is gonna be! Her with her tattling about him styin' all hours." She folded her fat, etup-

ped hands. "You're a smart girl, Mrs. Marshall. Husband's friend or no husband's friend, it don't do when a man pays too much attention to a pretty woman all by herself."

"I think we'd better get back to discussing the cleaning!" "Yes'm," Mrs. Kelly said, deflated.

"I'd like you to come once a day, just to let the dog out, and feed him." "I'd have to charge by the hour."

Long after Mrs. Kelly had gone, Martha stood there in the foyer, motionless. Everybody, everybody had the same idea! How stupid she had been! How blind! But as long as it wasn't true—as long as she wouldn't go out alone with Paul again—it didn't matter.

Bill was the only one who counted. He had never dreamed of such a thing. That Bill had trusted her, that more under-standing than anyone else on earth. She seemed to hear again his voice as he said at the station, "Take care of her, Paul."

Suddenly she wanted to hear his voice again. She went to the phone. "Operator, I'd like to speak to Mr. William Marshall at Camp McAllister, please. No, no one else will do."

It seemed to take an awfully long time to get him. Perhaps they had to look all over the camp. She wondered what the men did, evenings. Bill had made a "light" reference to a poker game in one of his letters.

At long last, his voice came. "Bill!" she cried. "Oh, Bill, is it really you?" "Martha? Darling, what's the matter, why did you call, is anything wrong?"

How dear his voice was! "No, stupid! I just wanted to talk to you. How are you?" "I'm fine, sweet. How are you?"

"Why didn't you call me when I asked you to?" "Almost, she could see the sheepish grin as he said, "Tell you the truth, I just didn't have the money."

"You could have reversed the charges, nut?" "You've got too many bills to pay now."

"Oh, darling, it's so good to hear you! Tell me, do you like being in the army?" "It isn't bad. My feet hurt all the time. The chow's good. Tell me about you. Missing me?" "Terrific. Always. Oh, darling. . . . She mustn't cry. "I miss you, too. How's Paul?" "Fine."

"Is he doing all right looking after you?" "She said, carefully, "Suzanne every night, the first two weeks. I wrote you, remember? But I— and Paul were with me almost all the time, any more. You know how it is, everybody has their own lives. Anyway, Butch and I are doing swell."

She was talking very rapidly. "I even took the cleaning off Mrs. Kelly's hands. She just comes in to feed Butch and let him out." Then she raced on. "Bill, I'd like to drive up to camp this week-end. Is it all right? Are you allowed visitors yet?" "Sure, we're allowed visitors. Every Sunday the camp's overrun with them. But it's an awfully long drive. Especially in Peg."

"I can make it, Bill. I might even take the train." "You'd better start Saturday afternoon, and sleep in town here. There's a hotel of some kind. I think they're sky high, though. Everything close to the camp is booming."

"Will you be able to come to town Saturday?" "I don't think so, Martha. I'll try, but I don't think I can make it."

"Never mind. I'll be around early Sunday. Oh, it'll be wonderful seeing you again!" The operator's mechanical voice cut in. "Your three minutes are up."

"Goodby, Bill. See you Sunday!" "Goodby, honey." (To be continued)
