POET'S CORNER

SOUNDS WE LEARN TO LOVE The passing of the wind; The falling of the rain, Beside a lonely window To you, was not in vain.

The singing of the birds When the world is still, Makes the moon seem brighter As you look across the hill.

The chirping of the cricket: That scraping little sound— Millions pause to listen Glad they came around.

The swishing of the water Beside the river bank, Turn to silver bells Among the rushes rank.

They all come around And they all remind us, Of sounds we've heard somewhere I wonder how they find us.

The passing of the wind; The falling of the rain, Beside our window Was surely not in vain. —G. M. Leeper.

FOR SOME OTHER DAY When things become a burden Look the other way, And leave an unwise decision For some other day. —G. M. Leeper.
