Every state, county and city official or board that handles public money should publish regular intervals an accounting of it, showing where and how each dollar is spent.

It is a sad coincidence that two men, long leaders in business and community affairs, were taken to their last resting places this week. Yesterday we mentioned the passing of Gene Parrott. This afternoon B. W. Strong, former merchant, banker, and civic leader was buried.

We note with sadness also the passing of good old Dick Cannon, the dean of all old-time fiddlers.

This column is not meant to be devoted to obituaries however much we would be pleased to pay a last tribute to a few words to each of those who are called as the days roll by. Time and space does not permit it. We live in a busy world. Nor should anyone complain, for we humans have made our world the way it is. We hustle and bustle and do this and do that and rush madly, often at reckless speeds. The news of the world is the news of what happens today. There is little or no time for reflection upon what has happened before.

Today a memorable event passed into history. A president of the United States was formally inducted into office. It is the first time in the history of our country that one man has been accorded this honor three times. The event was duly recorded in the newspapers and was broadcast by the hundreds of radio stations. But having quickly absorbed the shock—either of victory or defeat depending upon the individual preference—soon after election day, the inauguration ceremony actually rated only passing attention by people generally.

Democracy, true government by the people, can "take it." We do not call out firing squads or remove heads here in America when a change in government takes place. We are accustomed to the principle of rule by the majority of free votes, and we are content to abide by any decision arrived at in that way. Those of us who disapprove of some of the policies of the administration will, on the other hand, do everything possible to aid in their being carried out once they are duly made into law. That is being demonstrated every day, and has been demonstrated over and over again throughout our history. That is the spirit of America and that is why we shall remain free and proud—at least so long as we love and appreciate freedom and the right to choose our own government.

Missing Seminary Girl Pupil Sought

TACOMA, Wash., Jan. 20.—(AP)—Spurred on by the girl's father, city and state officers continued searching today for Carol Falk, 15-year-old pupil missing from exclusive Annie Wright seminary here since Saturday.

Dr. Ralph Falk, prominent Boise, Idaho, physician, arrived here yesterday after flying from his home when informed of his daughter's absence from school.

Miss Falk, described by a schoolmate as five feet, six inches tall, weighing 150 pounds, was missed from the seminary at 1:30 p. m. Saturday. Neither teachers nor other pupils saw her leave.

"I think," Dr. Falk said, "that she's at the age now where most girls want to go out and earn their own living, so I think that's what she has done." Asked if Carol had previously expressed such a desire, he replied, "yes, she has."

3 Freed in "I Am" Case; No Accord On Remaining Six

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 21.—(AP)—Three of nine defendants in the "I Am" trial were acquitted of mail fraud charges yesterday.

A federal jury declared itself unable to reach a verdict in the case of six other defendants, including Mrs. Edna Ballard, wife of the founder of the movement, and her son, Donald.

Defendants on whom no verdict was reached, in addition to Mrs. Ballard and her son, were Louis Majerus and Paul Stickle of Chicago; William J. Cassero, former Louisiana publisher known in the movement as "Brother Bill," an itinerant teacher; and Betty Mundy, formerly of Miami, Fla.

That the six will be tried again was indicated by Federal Judge Leon R. Yankwich when he said the case would be re-set in the term calendar beginning Feb. 3. Court observers said, however, that the government could move for a dismissal.

The defendants were indicted on 17 counts of mail fraud and one of conspiracy. Prosecuting attorneys contended the movement's leaders had conducted a $3,000,000 "racket" by preying upon the faith of their followers. Testimony and arguments in the six-week trial were concluded last Thursday.

Alien Registering Law Isn't State's Power, Court Rules

WASHINGTON, Jan. 21.—(AP)—The supreme court held yesterday that passage of the 1940 federal law requiring registration of aliens invalidated a 1939 Pennsylvania alien registration statute.

Justice Black delivered the opinion, which upheld justice department contentions that the regulation of alien registration "is exclusively the concern of the federal government."

Justice Stone wrote a dissenting opinion in which Chief Justice Hughes and Justice McReynolds concurred.

Justice Black said that "the power to restrict, limit, regulate, and register aliens as a distinct group is not an equal and continuous power of state and nation, but whatever power a state may have is subordinate to supreme national law."

SERIAL STORY

CONSCRIPT'S WIFE

BY BETTY WALLACE

YESTERDAY: Martha evades Paul, makes preparations to visit Bill. Paul suddenly turns up at the apartment, apparently intending to go along. When Martha finally tells him she doesn't want him to go, he asks what is wrong. She has been avoiding him. He had promised Bill to look after her. She finally tells him that before Bill left there were three of them—

CHAPTER X

PAUL ANSWERS QUESTIONS Paul Elliott stared down at Martha, speechlessly, as the echo of her words hung in the stillness. "The three of us," she had cried. And the implications of those words were suddenly filling the room—suddenly so plain, so clear, so hurting—that she wanted to run away from him. She could not bear the look in his eyes, the way a muscle in his lean cheek was twitching.

He fumbled in his jacket pocket for his pipe, at last. He tamped tobacco down into the bowl with a blunt forefinger, taking an awfully long time about it. And still the silence shrieked between them.

He fumbled in the pocket again for matches. Very deliberately—as if he wanted time to pass, as if he needed time to recover from this blow—Paul scratched a match, and sucked on the pipe-stem, lighting the tobacco.

The flame lit up his face in a fleeting orange glow. The grave dark eyes, the straight nose, the firm controlled mouth were etched clearly, like a picture on a screen, flashing and then dimming.

"Oh, I didn't want to hurt him," Martha thought in dismay. "He's so fine, so worthwhile. Maybe I'm destroying something I'll never find again. I hurt him once, when I married Bill. He forgave that." She thought of the clean, unselfish friendship—the strong arm, always ready to help her—and she experienced a sinking sense of loss.

"I didn't mean to say that, Paul," she cried quickly. "I—I didn't mean it—the way it sounds."

"Sit down, Martha," Paul said gently. "Sit down here and let's talk this over."

"But—but there's nothing to talk over." Again the panic and the uncertainty—as if her feet were set on a bit of earth that kept sliding out from under her. "The whole thing's silly, really. I—I didn't mean to put it that way." Her fingers smoothed the maroon housecoat, played with the ornaments on the zipper pull.

Paul pushed her gently down on the sofa. He sat beside her. "Martha, we must be honest with each other. Since this thing has come up—since we've already started discussing it—let's drag it out into the light and examine it."

"You have been avoiding me. Definitely. I couldn't understand why. What you just told me makes it very clear. It's because Bill is not here."

"Almost, his voice was like the voice of the Paul who sat in the private office at Air Transport, discussing with the chief engineer the stresses, strains, and examining the evidence to explain the crumpling of a wing in the wind tunnel. "You said 'the three of us.' Meaning, now that there are just two, you and I," he smiled, but his eyes were not smiling. "The situation has changed. Either you haven't ever really wanted me about, since you and Bill were married..."

"She gasped. 'Paul! That's not so!' I don't see how you can think that."

"Then, Martha, your remark must mean that you—that you're afraid of me. Or of how our being together with Bill away looks. It doesn't look proper, is that it?"

She stirred uncomfortably. "No, that's not it." "I don't believe you, Martha. Once there was a time when I would have sworn that gossip—other people's incorrect opinions—meant nothing to you. But now, especially after what Suzanne was foolish enough to get excited about—"

Martha's little start, the unguarded gasp that escaped her, was enough to betray the fact that Suzanne had had a finger in this, too.

Paul said, sadly, "So she came to you, too."

"She—she only wanted to warn me," Martha said miserably. "She knew there was nothing in it, but—the memory of her neighbors' whispers, the remark that even the cleaning woman had made, burned in her mind. 'She was right, Paul. Besides, it wasn't fair to her, that when you took her out I should always be there, like a—like a fifth wheel!'"

"Suzanne is intensely emotional. She has an imagination that sees a roaring blaze where other people see not even a wisp of smoke," said Paul, choosing his

Food Stamps Will Be Distributed On Mail Order Basis

Food stamps, when the U. S. department of agriculture's plan is extended to Douglas county the latter part of January, will be handled on a mail order basis according to official announcement.

All families receiving public assistance will be eligible to purchase food stamps by mail after they have been declared eligible by Darlow Johnson, county welfare administrator. Records already in the welfare department office permit making up the list of eligibles without requiring personal interview.

"Upon completion of the list of eligibles," advised Mr. Johnson, "detailed information will be sent each family. How the plan operates, what needs to be done to buy food stamps by mail—all this will be carefully explained."

How Plan Operates. Purpose of the plan is to move over-abundant crops into the homes of under-consuming families. For every dollar's worth of orange colored food stamps, good for any and all foods for human consumption, stamp plan participants receive fifty cents free of blue surplus food stamps. The blue stamps are good only to purchase those foods which are designated as "in surplus" by the secretary of agriculture.

Stamps are used in the same manner as cash at any food store which wishes to accept stamps. Such stores must be approved by the surplus marketing administration which redeems the stamps for payment to the retailer by the U. S. treasury. It is found that most retailers turn their stamp cards over to wholesalers as payments on account.

The inauguration of the food stamp plan eliminates direct distribution of surplus commodities through welfare department trucks and depots.

On the surplus food list at the present time are, butter, eggs, raisins, rice, pork lard, pork (to include all pork which is not cooked or packed in glass or metal containers), corn meal, dried prunes, hominy (corn)—grits, dry edible beans, wheat flour and whole wheat (graham) flour, Irish potatoes, fresh oranges, fresh apples, fresh pears, fresh grapefruit, fresh cabbage and onions (except green onions).

Mrs. Marion L. Lucas Passes at Marshfield

Marion R. Lucas, mother of George Lucas of Roseburg, died at the hospital in Marshfield yesterday after a long illness. Funeral services will be held in Marshfield Wednesday morning, followed by interment and graveside services at the Roseburg Masonic cemetery in the afternoon. Besides her son, Mrs. Lucas is survived by two daughters, Mrs. Dale (Betty) Webster and Frances Lucas, both of Marshfield. She was a daughter-in-law of Mrs. Paul Blaskie, of this city.

Quadruplets Die Few Hours Following Birth

MICHIGAN CITY, Ind., Jan. 21.—(AP)—Quadruplets were born yesterday to Mrs. Eva Swanson, 35 years old, 98-pound mother, but all the infants died within six and a half hours after they were brought into the world by cesarean section.

DAILY DEVOTIONS

DR. CHAS. A. EDWARDS A word fitly spoken is like apples of gold in baskets of silver. What power there is in words. Unfitly spoken they may destroy a reputation, break a heart, destroy a friendship. Vulgar, coarse words may destroy the sacredness of love. Words carelessly spoken may change the course of another's life. Starting him down toward a degraded character. But again what power there is in words, fitly spoken they bring harmony in human relationships, replace despair with hope, mitigate sorrow, inspire to noble ideals and dissipate loneliness. These kind words are as beautiful and as valuable as the most precious metals. They are like fruit of gold in baskets of silver. In the mind of God Christian words would go with Christian character. Any other combination would be illogical and unnatural. Words of courtesy and kindness should distinguish the speech of followers of Christ. "Men flying kites, haul in their white-winged birds. You can't do that way when you're flying words. Careful with fire is good advice, we know. Careful with words is ten times doubly so. Thoughts unexpressed may sometimes fall back dead, but God himself can't kill them once they're said." Amen.

Threatened Steel Strike Halted by C.I.O. President

PITTSBURGH, Jan. 20.—(AP)—Emphasizing the defense emergency, CIO President Philip Murray quickly halted a strike that threatened to stop production at Carnegie-Illinois Steel corporation's Irvin works and told steel workers who were back on their jobs today that "grievances must be settled by orderly processes."

Murray, also chairman of the CIO steel workers union, last night ordered immediate resumption of operation at the vast plant after a walkout of 290 slab yard workers Friday night which spread into general strike action yesterday. They had demanded wage increases and seniority rights.
