High Power

WINTHROP, Wash.—Farmer Jack Jones' cider should pass the taste test, if that deer wasn't fooling. Jones made cider last fall and left the apple residue outside his cellar. A herd of deer began coming to sample it. Now, reports Jones: "I saw a four-point buck stop nibbling at the pomace and shake his head. One antler fell off. I thought he didn't like the stuff, but he came back the next night and shook off the other antler."
