Lost Pup 'Finds' Himself Just In Time At Ad Dept.

Spot, a terrier pup belonging to Deb Day of the Roseburg Bowling Alleys, is a mighty smart dog. Spot, it might be judged from his actions, even knows that a lost-and-found department is to be located at a newspaper office.

The Day household pet became lost last night and was diligently hunted by Mr. and Mrs. Day, who had planned to leave early this morning for Portland. They delayed the start of their trip today as they made further search for the pup.

Spot, however, arrived at the News-Review office about 9 a. m. He knew Charley Stanton, the city editor, and proceeded to beat a path between the news desk and the front door until he made Mr. Stanton understand he wanted to be taken home.

The pup arrived just as the master was composing an advertisement to be inserted in the newspaper's classified department—thus proving that even a dumb animal can recognize the value of News-Review service.
