Every state, county and city official or board that handles public money should publish at regular intervals an accounting of it, showing where and how each dollar is spent. This is a fundamental principle of democratic government.

NEITHER Germany nor Britain has stated with any directness, its war aims—the kind of Europe and the kind of world they would like to see emerge from the war.

As long as both are locked in death grips, it isn't likely that either will. Once at war, the only object is to win. Remolding the world comes afterward.

There can be no harm, therefore, and perhaps some good, in speculation about these things in the United States.

We had a hand once in rearranging Europe. It was a reluctant hand, as shown by the fact that the United States fought only as an "associate," never an "allied" power, and that it never did sign the Versailles treaty, but made a separate peace with Germany later (treaty of Berlin, 1921). Most of the suggestions we made in 1919 were rejected, and even those which were adopted did not work very well.

Yet when Senator Wheeler issued his recent prescription for Europe, his 1941 version of a Wilsonian fourteen points, what did he propose? Nothing better than another of those interminable reshufflings, re-carvings, of the European map.

It seems doubtful if anything like that will do this time. No matter who wins, the defeated people will remain a fact, and a stubborn fact. Germany was beaten, and thoroughly beaten, in 1918, but the German people remained a fact. The French people were beaten this time, and terribly beaten, but they remain a fact, as Herr Hitler is already beginning to discover. Franco already knows that, despite the shootings and executions, the large republican element in his people remains a fact. And the Norwegian people are facts, and the Dutch and the Belgian, and the Polish and Czech. Military victory does not eliminate peoples. They remain.

No possible rearrangement of Europe into another set of nationalistic closets, walled off from the rest of tariff barriers and artificial restrictions, can be much better than the one devised in 1919—a rearrangement, by the way, that embodied a considerable amount of scientific study, and was by no means entirely a victor's caprices.

Europe must federate or die. Not as the Caesars federated it, or as Napoleon tried to federate it, under a single master working the other peoples as slaves—such a federation leaves safe no country in the world.

Europe requires a continental economy, allowing national political and cultural institutions, yet allowing continental freedom of shipping and intercourse and trade in such a way that all can live.

The United States can certainly impose no such order in Europe, nor would it be so foolish as to try. Yet Europe itself has produced almost no leadership with such a vision.

We can only hope that somewhere, in the trenches or bomb-shelters, it is being born.

tle reports and army and navy intelligence information. If that is true, they are more than mere guesses.)

THIS thought still sticks in most minds:

Nothing Britain may be called upon to face can be more menacingly terrible than the retreat from Dunkerque with Holland, Belgium and France falling all around.

TODAY'S dispatches indicate that the lease-lend bill is likely to pass with its life limited to two years, the use of American convoys banned, periodic reports to congress on lease-lend operations required and the president directed to consult with army and navy heads before transferring military equipment.

IN themselves, these limitations are unimportant. The logic of events and the temper of the people will determine what the United States will do in the coming critical months or years.

In principle, they are extremely important, for they are intended to say to the country that congress is not abdicating.

Keeping that principle alive through the war emergency MEANS MUCH.

INTERESTING and encouraging:

The chamber of commerce of the United States (the highest spokesman of business and industry) announces today its opposition to federal anti-strike legislation, expressing the belief that "the public interest will be best served by VOLUNTARY co-operation."

Step-Mother Problem.

"When a woman weds a widower with a son who hotly resents her, has the marriage any chance for success." This is the arresting issue in the "I Want a Divorce" drama, starring Joan Blondell, which will be heard tonight, January 31, over the Mutual network and Station KRNR at 8:30 o'clock.

The wife walks into a home dominated by the shadow of the deceased first wife and filled with the hatred of her step-son and her husband's embittered sister. How the wife, played by Joan Blondell, strives to make the boy and the sister like her, and how her efforts meet only a cold wall of resentment until she proves her worth under fire, are situations powerfully and movingly presented in a spellbinding half-hour play.

Louis Expected To Hand Burman Beating Tonight

NEW YORK, Jan. 31.—(AP)—Red Burman, a father of two children and a real good heavyweight, faces Joe Louis in Madison Square garden ring tonight in the big negro's 13th defense of the world's championship.

As usual, the odds against the challenger are prohibitive, and most of what betting takes place will hinge on the number of rounds Burman lasts. It will, of course, be a great surprise if the redhead manages to weather the entire 15 rounds and loses by nothing worse than a decision.

Despite an occasional poor showing, such an in his last bout with Al McCoy in Boston in December, Louis still has the boys buffaloed. They know that when Joe is "right" and for some vague reason feels like tearing a man apart he is deadly as rat poison.

Few who saw it will ever forget what he did to Max Schmeling the second time they met, when slighting remarks by the German had kindled a hatred in Joe. He literally tried to kill Schmeling and came fairly near doing it. He is supposed to harbor something of the same unkind feeling for Burman, and though a lot of it probably is just press agent talk, still, it isn't good to have Joe even a little mad.

He is supposed to be sore at Red because Jack Dempsey said that he (Louis) couldn't take a punch around the head. Dempsey owns a piece of Burman, and has made other uncomplimentary remarks about Louis in the last two years while he has been trying to chivvy Red into a fight with the champion. Now it all comes back on poor Red.

Louis has trained long and earnestly for this one. His managers, recalling that the champion didn't move around very spryly in his bout with McCoy, have run him half to death over the snowy hills and his long, brown legs are back like they were before he discovered the joys of easy living. Prospects are he will be a tough man tonight.

Portland's Ray Price Defeats Lew Feldman

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 31.—(AP)—After flooring his opponent for a one-count in the third, Ray Price of Portland, Ore., kept on the pressure to win a technical knockout over Lew Feldman of New York in the ninth round of their scheduled 10-frame fight here last night. At the end Feldman was hanging on the ropes.

Price weighed 130, Feldman 135.

Thousands 'Party' To Swell Fund to Fight Paralysis

WASHINGTON, Jan. 31.—(AP)—They threw an immense party for President Roosevelt last night.

"They" were the tens of thousands throughout the nation who celebrated the president's 59th birthday at parties, balls and other festivities and thereby raised money for the campaign against infantile paralysis.

Mr. Roosevelt told them his gratitude in a radio speech from the White House. Their assistance in the campaign against paralysis he called "the rarest birthday present of all—the gift of your charity, your kindliness to each other and to the nation."

In the capital, alone, some 41,000 who jampacked festival gatherings heard the president's words as they went out to nationwide parties of every variety from the swankiest balls to the jitterbug jamborees.

It was not a completely happy birthday for him, Mr. Roosevelt explained, because "these are not completely happy days for any of us in the world."

"Shall we say," he asked, however, "that American birthdays this year are being made at least happier than they would otherwise be because all of us are still living under a free people's philosophy?"

Returns to Work—Miss Dolma Grobe has returned to her work at the Style Shop, following several days' illness at her home.

DAILY DEVOTIONS

DR. CHAS. A. EDWARDS

The great leaders and prophets of the Old Testament period regarded the future Messianic age as one wherein there would be a full outpouring of the spirit of God. When this era dawned the Messiah, God's anointed, would be fully endowed with heavenly power. The gospels of the New Testament, which tell the story of Jesus, also relate how those dreams and hopes of the Old Testament had been fulfilled. The life of our Lord is depicted in the light of those prophetic anticipations. The narrative of St. Mark opens with the baptism and the attestation by God that Jesus is the anointed. He is set apart for His Messianic vocation and becomes fully conscious of His filial relationship with God. The fullness of the spirit came upon Him, and it remains permanently with Him. Throughout His subsequent career the spirit of God operates in and through Him. That power anticipated in the future Messianic age was now fully present and active, and this was the secret of His authority and mighty works. The day of Pentecost was the full outpouring of the spirit of God, upon the disciples, anointing them with the Holy Spirit and with power

LITTLE STORIES OF GREAT HYMNS

"SWEET HOUR OF PRAYER"
Rev. Wm. W. Walford

"Sweet hour of pray'r! sweet hour of pray'r!
That calls me from a world of care,
And bids me at my Father's throne,
Make all my wants and wishes known!
In seasons of distress and grief,
My soul has often found relief,
And oft escaped the tempter's snare,
By thy return, sweet hour of prayer."

This hymn, considered the most popular prayer hymn of the 19th century, was written by the Rev. Wm. W. Walford, a blind minister, in England in 1842. Although handicapped by lack of sight, he possessed a keen mind and in his preaching quoted the Bible accurately, including the references, thus gaining the reputation of knowing the Scriptures by heart.
