POET'S CORNER

CLEAR LAKE

The undaunted power
Of drifting sand
Has left a tower
To wasted land.

Grain by grain
It glides away,
Hushed and silent,
Dumb and grey.

O'er rock and pebble
It made a hill,
Through many a midnight
Cold and still.

And when morning broke
And the task was done,
A lake lay shimmering
Beneath the sun.

A long hard task
To pile that sand,
Where the salt spray
Raised its dripping hand.

And tossed the sand
On the midnight breeze,
Till a newborn lake
Mirrored a million trees.

The undaunted power
Of drifting sand,
Stands as a tower
To wasted land.

—G. M. Leeper.

THEY CANNOT BE PUT ASIDE

Words are strange things
That cannot be put aside,
And when you lie in slumber
Across your dreams they ride.

—G. M. Leeper.
