

Defense Garden Program Should Fit Needs of Family; Suggestions Offered

Good Planning Will Give Balanced Diet

Maximum benefits from the defense garden are reaped when all work is done by the owner. The size of the most profitable garden will therefore depend upon the amount of leisure the owner has, and his inclination to do gardening work.

Unless the product of the home garden is needed for food which could not be purchased, it is not wise to plant a larger space than will be well tended. Two hours on each of three days a week devoted to this leisurely, pleasant and healthful physical recreation will take good care of a garden 30 by 40 feet or thereabouts; and from this space can be harvested vegetables sufficient for the average family, except for potatoes and sweet corn.

In deciding what shall be grown, these crops may be considered as necessary in most sections of our country: Beans, lima beans, peas, carrots, cabbage, chard, cucumbers, lettuce, parsnips, parsley, peppers, onion sets, peas, radishes, Swiss chard, tomatoes.

Eliminate, of course, those you do not like, and remember that it is better to grow small amounts of many things than to devote your entire area to relatively few vegetables which will likely be overproduced, and give you a monotonous diet.

Substitutes Suggested

One of the great advantages of the home garden is the opportunity it gives to grow annual vegetables which you might not otherwise try. To replace items eliminated from the above list, or to add to it if you have the space, here are some suggestions:

Brussels sprouts for fall crop; celery, broccoli, especially the green sprouting, Chinese cabbage for fall salads; chicory or endive for fall green salads; collards, corn salad, eggplant, leek, cress, kale, kohlrabi, leek, melons, mustard green, pumpkin, kra, oyster plant, spinach, squash, both the winter kind and the summer varieties which are so delicious in the baby stage, especially the vegetable marrow; and turnips and rutabagas, which are especially successful in sections which have an early spring and late fall.

A ramble through your seed catalogue will produce other suggestions which should be considered in making up your seed order. Some new vegetable or variety added to your list will give you more pleasure than the staples, and it will be something to serve your friends when they come to dine.
