Every state, county and city official or board that handles public money should publish at regular intervals an accounting of it, showing where and how each dollar is spent. This is a fundamental principle of democratic government.

THIS week is designated nationally as "Boy Scout week." Today is the anniversary of the birth of one of the great men of all time—Abraham Lincoln.

Before discussing the rather poignant relationship between these two observances, it is definitely in order to call attention to the fact that the drive for funds for the Boy Scout activity of our area began today. Work as comprehensive and as constructive as the work of the Boy Scouts organization does not just happen. Not only a lot of manpower is required throughout the year, and every year, but a substantial amount of money is needed. This is not a new thing but there is time between drives for us to forget.

Not all of us, of course, can take part in the work program of the Boy Scout movement. But a considerable number can and should support this worthy cause financially.

Since Lincoln's birthday is one of the days of national Boy Scout week, the thought arises as to what sort of boy was Lincoln.

The boyhood of this great man has not been greatly discussed.
It is known, however, that he was pretty awkward, quite shy but with plenty of spirit and ample wit when occasion demanded.

There was no Boy Scout organization when Lincoln was a boy—but he would have been a loyal scout. Yes, Lincoln would surely have attained the rank of Eagle Scout for he was thorough, eager to learn and very dependable.

There was a strong force ever driving the boys of Lincoln's time—a stronger force, doubtless, than the Boy Scout work of today. That force was the force of stark necessity. Boys in those days had to become men at an early age. They were not only driven by problems of existence but they early learned of the problems of the new democracy of which they were a vital part, and they gave themselves generously to the solution of those problems. Lincoln was a member of a hardy, courageous and forceful generation.

Think this over: Just about the only influence today that endeavors to make a boy self-reliant, courageous and patriotic, is scouting. When we give to the cause of scouting we donate for training—nothing is given to the boy himself but the mental equipment and spirit of real Americanism—our modern counterpart, if you will, of the spirit that saved the Union, and in time welded it back together again into one great and powerful country.

Other influences of today tend to destroy moral fiber. Scouting builds.

Generally speaking our boys have been smothered with generosity. They have been pampered, kept young and sheltered from responsibility. They have been force-fed with ideas many of them false—foremost of which is that government is paternal and should give. Without realizing it we have, during these last ten years, created a philosophy that government should do something, if not everything, for the individual.

In Lincoln's time they were concerned about doing things to aid and preserve the government.

There was more giving and less asking then.

We should be starting on the long road back else we topple over a cliff in the other direction.

The Boy Scout organization leads the way in the right direction—we should support it in every way that we can think of.

though improved, did not yet reflect the substantial increase in industrial employment.

"THE REPAYMENT OF OLD DEBTS was thought still to impede the full expansion in buying."

IN other words, considerable numbers of people are paying off their debts before proceeding to spend the new money arising out of war production.

This in so many words old-fashioned thinker has a notion that before the war production cycle that is now beginning is completed those who pay their debts and put aside something for a rainy day will be looked upon as smart.

MORE war statistics, provided in this instance by the statisticians of the Metropolitan Life Insurance company:

"Europe's death rate is rising —without counting military deaths, or even the civilians killed by bombs. The data is fragmentary, but ominous.

"Higher death rates from disease early in 1940 were credited to Amsterdam, Copenhagen, Stockholm and Budapest, but England furnishes the most complete figures. In English cities of 50,000 or more, the death rates were up 20 per cent. In London, the rate was up 80 per cent over 1939, but the statisticians made the guess that the real rise appreciably exceeded this figure when evacuations of children and absence of men of military age were taken into account."

The four horsemen are riding.

Tacoma Executives, Army Heads End Their Spat

TACOMA, Wash., Feb. 12.— (AP)—All's well again today between the military and municipal generalissimos of Fort Lewis and Tacoma.

After threatening to keep the fort's soldiers out of Tacoma because the safety commissioner had described them as a police problem, Maj. Gen. George A.
White, conciliated by assurances from the mayor, expressed confidence the army and city would get along just splendidly together.

Mayor Harry P. Cain in turn described the army lads as "exceedingly well-behaved when in Tacoma."

The mayor attributed most of the flare-up to a misunderstanding because the safety commissioner, Holmes Eastwood, had conferred only with subordinates instead of with the fort's high command, "and, as a result, got some wrong impressions."

Nearly 30,000 soldiers are stationed at rapidly expanding Fort Lewis, 10 miles from this city of 110,000.

DAILY DEVOTIONS

DR. CHAS. A. EDWARDS

Seeking a Deliverer and a Saviour, the Great God in His Infinite Wisdom, passed by the palace with its silken delights. He took a little babe in His arms and called to His side His favorite angel, the Angel of Sorrow. O Sorrow, thou well-beloved teacher of mine, said He, take thou this child and make him great.
Take him to yonder cabin in the wilderness, make his home a poor man's house, bind his little back with burdens that are grievous to be borne, cut his little feet as he climbs up the stony pathway of life, wrest from his heart everything that loves. Give him days of toil and nights of sleeplessness and study. Make him to drink the crimson blood of a broken heart. Dig hollows in his cheeks and make his face more marred than the face of any man of his time. Make him as sensitive to the sigh of a slave as a silken thread in a zephyr's breath that blows and when thou hast done all this, O Sorrow, bring him back to me and with him I will free four millions of slaves and that is how God made Abraham Lincoln.

God bless America, land that I love;
Stand beside her and guide her Through the night with a light from above;
From the mountains to the prairies,
To the oceans, white with foam, God bless American, my home, sweet home.

—Irving Berlin.
